Mussolini Not Smiling
Russia Accuses Hitler
Two Lie in State
England Is Learning

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

A FEW DAYS since Mussolini and Hitler were shaking hands violently in Venice, with beaming faces, while photographers took pictures. They would not smile so gaily now, with Mussolini referring to the assassination of Dollfuss, speaking of that crime as one committed "from afar."

That "from afar" could not refer to any country but Germany, or any individual except Hitler.

Pope Pius' statements of Dollfuss' "having commended his noble soul to Heaven, we beg from Heaven real peace for Catholic Austria," will comfort Dollfuss' disconsolate widow and children, devout Catholics, distressed that Dollfuss' cruel murderers would not allow him religious consolation and the last sacrament at his death.

In a dispatch to President Miklas of Austria, Pope Pius refers to Dollfuss as "humane Christian, a most faithful son of the Catholic Church and valiant defender of his country."

In addition to sending an army to the Austrian border, Mussolini, preparing for any move for annexation by Germany and to restore order in Austria in case of need, also sends a large flock of fighting airplanes to sail above his Italian army and impress one and all.

Always effectively dramatic, Mussolini may simply be indulging in gestures that delight him as much as the Fascists' attitude.

On the other hand, he may feel that soldiers and airplanes will soon be necessary.

The widow of Dollfuss receives condolences from all the world's civilized rulers, including President Roosevelt, who tells her that the "Death of Chancellor Dollfuss at the hands of an assassin shocked and grieved me beyond expression. Mrs. Roosevelt joins with me in expressing to Madame Dollfuss our sympathy in this great sorrow which has come to her."

The State Department expresses satisfaction with conditions in Austria and believes that the Austrian government has "a firm hold," although savage fighting is reported from southern Austria, where Mussolini has 48,000 troops massed on the frontier.

Mussolini seems to think that Germany and Hitler were connected with the Dollfuss murder, and the organ of Russia's supreme economic council says: "German Nazis cannot convince anyone they are not responsible for the action of the Austrian Nazis, because the use of a radio station in Germany by Austrian Nazis confirms the responsibility of German Fascists."

Russians, however, are naturally inclined to take a gloomy view of Hitler's performances since the Hitler government announced its intention of wiping out Communism and its false doctrines as soon as possible.

Chancellor Dollfuss, with one bullet hole in his neck and other wounds, lies in state in the Chancellory, where he was shot, thousands of citizens passing by to pay him homage. There are many kinds of killings and of "lying in state." A few days before the courageous and unfortunate Dollfuss was murdered, another man, killed "officially," lay on a slab in the morgue in Chicago, while citizens were allowed to pass by his corpse and admire his wounds and the work that "beauty experts" had done, "lifting his face," dyeing his hair, to change his appearance and deceive the police.

Stalin, of Russia, has seen his first game of polo, with President Roosevelt's representative as umpire and Mr. Bullit's aide as coach.

Stalin allowed men of his Red army to take part in the game, presumably to please the American ambassador. It should be easy to find among Cossack riders a polo team that would surprise the British and American international players.

3 BANDITS GET $2200 PAY IN JAMAICA

ROB 2 AT GUN POINT, POLICE RADIO NEAR

Three armed bandist today trailed the superintendant of Hugh S Lyons Construction Company and another employe into its garage in Floydell street, Jamaica Plain, and robbed them of a $2200 payroll at gun point.

The gunmen, two of them wearing smoked glasses and the third with a handkerchief tied across his face, made their escape in a sedan. The sped through South Huntington avenue and Brookline.

As the first real test for the police department's new radio system, the holdup demonstrated very forcibly that many details remain to be worked out before this alarm system becomes the potent weapon against crime it is expected to be.

When the holdup was first reported, the news was flashed to the Brookline police because the firm happens to have a Longwood telephone number. From there the call was relayed to Station 13. There it was found that the firm's plant was outside the station's territory, so the call was finally put through to Station 10.

NEW NAZI BATTLE IN AUSTRIA; MANY MORE SHOT DOWN

By ALFRED TYRNAUER
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Vienna, July 28—Scorning a truce even while Austria was burying her slain chancellor, fighting flared up anew today in Salzburg, Styria and other sections of the country.

Many new deaths, and the wounding of scores were reported.

The Nazis, apparently reinforced, launched new attacks and fought desperately as government troops and the Heimwehr tried to drive them from their positions.

Rome, July 28—A second wave of Italian troops started northward today to support 48,000 men now concentrated on the Austrian border, the Associated Press has learned.

These reinforcements are not on the border but are within striking distance of it. They were sent up from military posts in the south to corps headquarters at Bolzano, Udine and Trieste.

Official military circles demonstrated great uneasiness today as reports from Austria showed the Nazi revolution still flamed.

Italian cities from Florence on the south and particularly Rome present an unusual appearance. Normally every fourth man appears to be in uniform but now about the only uniforms visible on streets are those of Fascist juvenile organizations.

Officers and soldiers have moved north, most of them into training camps and other posts near the frontier.

Travel agencies and the American consulate are advising American tourists going to Germany to avoid Austria and travel through Switzerland.

Premier Mussolini is represented as feeling that any further diplomatic overtures can serve no useful purpose. He appeared determined today to lend a prompt hand if he feels the situation warrants.

Spokesmen for the government, however, insist that intervention is not necessarily imminent. They are watching Vienna with a particularly keen eye today, fearful that the funeral of the assassinated Chancellor Dollfuss may prove the match to set off new disorders.

Government spokesmen express the hope that the Austrians will be able to settle their own affairs, but they make it plain that whe-

Nazis Wait Nightfall for New Drive Against Heimwehr

By WADE WERNER

Vienna, July 28—Government forces today smashed fighting Nazis back against the Jugoslav border in Styria, but a Nazi leader declared: "If (the Nazi forces in) Carinthia can only hold the executive party at bay until tonight we shall be ready to start a new putsch in Styria, and this time, believe me, it will be more successful."

While in Vienna, thousands of mourners filed past the bier of the slain chancellor, Engelbert Dollfuss, whose murder Wednesday was the signal for the Nazi putsch, fighting was resumed in the mountains of Styria and Carinthia.

At Ebiswald, near the Yugoslav border, the government forces outnumbered the Nazis and were able to drive the enemy from the village. The Nazis, however, took new positions in the mountain pass which forms the connecting link between Styria and Yugoslavia.

The government soldiers went into the pass after them, the Nazis retreating slowly. Some of them apparently scattered but the majority, numbering approximate-

Lawes' Tumor Is Surgeon's Lost Sponge

By International News Service

Ossining, N. Y., July 28—A surgical sponge that was lost six years ago was discovered today, safely ensconced in the thigh of Warden Lewis E. Lawes of Sing Sing prison, after an operation to remove what was believed to be a tumor on his thigh.

Recently, Warden Lawes began to feel pains coming from a protuberance on his thigh that had grown to about the size of a lemon. After an examination by doctors of the prison hospital staff, it was decided to remove the tumor immediately.

The operation was performed by Dr. Charles C. Sweet, head surgeon of the prison hospital. To his surprise he found a surgical sponge that was inadvertently left in a wound, following an operation the Warden underwent six years ago. Warden Lawes is resting comfortably today and no complications are expected to result, it was said.

STRATOSPHERE BALLOON OFF

Chicago, July 28 (AP)—Major William E. Kepner, pilot of the stratosphere balloon Explorer, at 8:58 (Central Standard Time) reported by radio the balloon had reached an altitude of 15,000 to 15,460 feet. At the radio offices here it was understood the balloon was over Cheyenne River, near Dalzell, S. D., 33 miles from Rapid City.

By Associated Press

Rapid City, S. D., July 28—The world's largest balloon, with three intrepid airmen in the huge metal gondola, took off at 5:45 a. m. Mountain standard time today for a daring flight into the stratosphere.

Major William E. Kepner was on top of the gondola. Later he joined Captain Albert W. Stevens and Captain Orvil A. Anderson inside the gondola.

Just before the take-off Major Kepner had said:

"The successful inflation was a notable achievement. No balloon this large has ever been handled before and the men deserve full credit."

Woman Lost in Harvard Forest

Petersham, July 28—Police revealed today that the "Mrs. Eaton," missing in the Harvard University forest, is Mrs. Mabel Eaton, member of a wealthy Hartford, Ct. family, and that she had struggled with a girl companion who tried to get her to return to safety.

Doubt that she would be found alive was expressed by Deputy Sheriff Joseph Higgins, who is directing a posse of several hundred searchers. He said Mrs. Eaton was in no physical condition to stand the hardship of a night in the open.

FOG HANDICAPS SEARCH

Members of her family, he declared, said she had been ill for some time and was on the verge of a nervous breakdown.

Fog and rain halted the search for a time early this morning but it was resumed after a short time with many new volunteers.

The missing woman with a party of friends stopped here yesterday for a picnic lunch while on a vacation trip through New England.

Following lunch Mrs. Eaton and a young girl companion whose name police would not reveal, went for a stroll through the woods. As they went deeper into the woods the girl suggested that they return to the party but Mrs. Eaton refused, police said.

STRUGGLES WITH GIRL

A struggle followed as the girl tried to drag her back. Leaving Mrs. Eaton, the girl finally ran to summon help but when other members of the party reached the scene, Mrs. Eaton had disappeared.

The missing woman is described as only 5 feet in height and weighing 85 pounds. She was wearing a blue dress and hat.

Worker Hurt in Fall

John Ferreira, 38, of Elm street, Cambridge, suffered a possible fractured spine this morning when he fell 20 feet to the ground from the staging of a house he was painting at 45 Lee street, Cambridge. He was rushed to Cambridge city hospital in a police ambulance.

BENTZ IS FREED, RE-ARRESTED

Portland, Me., July 28—Theodore Bentz, alias Craig, alleged Dillinger informant, was released on one bank robbery charge here today only to be immediately rearrested on another.

He was rushed from Federal Court to police headquarters, where a 24-hour guard of officers, with sawed-off shot-guns, was mounted inside and outside the cell block for fear that confederates would make an attempt to deliver the man.

Bentz was arraigned on a warrant, charging him with being a fugitive from Vermont, where he was wanted in connection with the robbery of the Caledonia National Bank at Danville.

He was ordered released by United States Commissioner Richard K. Gould after Edward J. Harrigan, assistant federal district attorney, told him that a federal investigation had not disclosed sufficient evidence to warrant holding Bentz.

The man, however was immediately rearrested by the Portland police and charged with participation in the robbery of the People's Savings Bank at Grand Haven, Mich., which was held up on August 18, 1933, and looted of $2588 in cash and $1745 in bonds.

AFTER 20 YEARS EUROPE AGAIN IS THREATENED BY WAR

WAR DECLARED!—On July 28, 1914, Vienna dispatches to Boston announced that Austria declared war against Servia. Official notification was sent to Belgrade for transmission to the Servian government. Austrian troops invaded Servia at five different points on the northern frontier, according to advice received that evening in Boston. This action was taken as soon as the Austro-Hungarian government was notified that Germany had refused to become a party to any conference having for its aim the mediation of the difference between Austria and Servia. The Austrian government gave formal notice through the British ambassador at Vienna that it would refuse to hold hostilities pending the result of such a conference and shortly afterwards issued a declaration of war.

WAR MOVE BY CZAR—July 29, 1914, the day following declaration of war by Austria on Servia, news reached Boston that the Czar ordered the mobilization of troops from the German frontier to the Black Sea. "Hands off," cried out the Kaiser. "Russia will enforce the integrity of Servia as if it were Russian territory," the Czar answered. Severe fighting is reported on the river Dina between Austrian and Servian troops. At the same time reports came into Boston from Vienna that Poland was in revolt. The British government prepares for war, as the Kaiser orders all German warships ready for instant action, according to a London bulletin. Berlin reports that 100,000 Social Democrats protest against war; rioting ensues. Curiously enough, no dispatches had been received in Boston that day from Paris as to French action.

The romantic appeal of fictionary wars was hideously trampled under grim hoofs of reality. The "war to save democracy" proved nothing—unless it was the foolishness of mankind. Theoretically the Allies won the World War—but did they? The appalling total of 8,538, 315 soldiers died in that miserable chaos, of whom more than 5,000,000 were Allies. Over 65,000,000 men were marshalled to the colors, and of them 37,500,000 were wounded or killed. No victory can be sweet with so much waste of human life. The financial cost, too, was tremendous. The cost to the United States is close to $50,000,000,000. Future American generations will still have to bear the burden of one generation's folly. Thus the present crisis in Europe is so significant. Will the European nations once again lose their heads and hurtle the world into another war?

NEW NAZI DRIVE LAUNCHED IN TERROR-RIDDEN AUSTRIA

ly 200, crossed over the Yugoslav frontier and surrendered to the Yugoslavian border guard.

The peasant population of the province, which is generally regarded as a Nazi stronghold, immediately began talking about revenge, and indicated they were awaiting news from Carinthia as to the developments there.

CELEBRATE VICTORY

Meanwhile the Heimwehr and the Catholic storm troops in Graz, the capital of Styria, were celebrating their victory.

They made wholesale arrests of Nazis and even of Nazi sympathizers. They raided clothing stores in search of neckties and other wearing apparel with the colors of the German flag.

People in the streets, even girls wearing dresses showing the combination of black, white and red, were compelled to remove the colors.

A milk dealer arriving in Graz from Andritz reported that more than 100 Nazis had been arrested there. He said they were stripped of clothes and arrested terrible beatings as "the first treatment."

Bitter fighting took place in the vicinity of the fortress of Salzburg during the night, resulting in a number of dead and wounded on both sides.

COMMANDER KILLED

At Liefering, not far from the German border, a Heimwehr commander was killed and six of his men wounded during a skirmish with Nazis.

The fighting in and around Lamprechtshausen was especially heavy. The Nazis left four dead and 29 wounded on the scene of battle. The government forces also suffered a great number of wounded, two of whom died on the way to a hospital.

Clashes also occurred at Mandling where a Heimwehr detachment was attacked by Nazis. The Nazis were beaten off with a loss of 9 dead and 17 wounded, while the Heimwehr outfit lost one killed and one wounded.

Desperate fighting is under way in southern and western Austria. Nazis, their casualties in the thousands, continue grimly to carry on the four-day-old warfare.

Battles are on at numerous points near Salzburg, next to the German border.

Another sector of conflict is east-border.

ern Tyrol. The government is rushing troops in increasing numbers to that section in an effort to stamp out the revolt.

Carinthia is a tangle of barbed wire. It is jammed with soldiers bearing gleaming bayonets. The wounded are pouring in from neighboring battlefields.

There was no serious fighting in Vienna itself today as Chancellor Dollfuss was buried.

Guns, however, bristled everywhere, evidence of fears his funeral might be an occasion for fresh outbreaks.

The funeral hour was 3:30 p. m. (8:30 a. m., Boston time) with services at the Socialist city hall. Dollfuss survived by scarcely five months the many Socialist victims of the February civil war.

With Dollfuss dead, his program continues to live, guided by his successor, Prince Ernest von Starhemberg. "Do not depart one inch from the way prescribed by Dollfuss" was his plea to the nation. Casualties in all fighting since the revolt began are estimated at close to 3,000, but there are no official figures.

ARRESTS BY WHOLESALE

At Ischl, the famous spa where Emperor Francis-Joseph spent his summers, a raid in which patients take drinking cures was bombed. Much material damage was done. There were no casualties.

The government in view of these acts of terrorism has made wholesale arrests at Ischl and Lienz of Nazi sympathizers and persons who formerly belonged to the Nazi party.

Reports of new fighting came today from St. George Namsandhof, Carinthia. Nazis occupied the heights surrounding the town. Government forces soon gained the upper hand and forced the Nazis to retreat, leaving nine dead and 16 wounded. Two machine guns were captured.

NAZIS ARE REPULSED

Nazis attacked the town of Seekirchen, near Salzburg, but were repulsed. In other sections of Salzburg Nazis tried to gather repeatedly, but the Heimwehr promptly dispersed them.

Eighty were reported injured at Badaussee, Styria, some 15 miles from Bryen Pass, in a skirmish between Nazis and government forces.

From Styria have come official reports claiming the revolution is dying down, although at the cost thus far to federal troops of two officers and seven soldiers killed and 16 wounded. Bombings and other acts of terrorism, however, serve to make the Styrian population exceedingly nervous.

Near Graz a mast carrying high-tension wires was dynamited during the night, plunging the city into darkness. In the suburbs of Graz Communists showed signs of increased activity.

CARINTHIA TROUBLE CENTER

Wholesale arrests in Carinthia during the night included Count Councillor Maier, director of the Storia School of Applied Arts, who is charged with operating a radio station in his laboratory for the Nazi cause.

Motor lorries carrying armed Heimwehr men were seen to proceed from beyond Leoben in the direction of Carinthia, indicating the center of difficulties has shifted to that province.

Tyrolese Alpine troops were sent to Upper Carinthia to establish order. At Wolfsberg they found themselves sorely pressed by Nazis, who were in the majority, but after losing their commander, Major Smoasle, and suffering numerous injuries the troops carried the day.

Authorities expressed confidence the revolt can be crushed before it has a chance to develop into a conflagration compelling the intervention of one or more neighboring nations.

There is no attempt to conceal the fact that Italy is fully authorized to rush her troops across the border if the Nazi uprising becomes too powerful for Austrian Fascism.

Rumors that Italians had actually entered Carinthia are denied vigorously.

Socialist handbills are being circulated saying, "Our hour approaches! Be ready for action!" The handbills say the death of Dollfuss "was received by the masses with undisguised joy as the death of a pirate and murderer of liberty."

While streets in Vienna are closed to traffic, the action following reports that the square before the chancellery was to be stormed by Nazis. Machine guns are stationed at strategic points.

Troops by the hundreds patrol the streets.

TOLL FOR DOLLFUSS

Church bells throughout the city tolled for three hours after the funeral of Dollfuss.

Reports that eight of the 144 Nazis who seized the chancellery on the killed Dollfuss had been executed are not confirmable. The Nazis are held prisoners here.

War Flame Set World Afire 20 Years Ago Today

Twenty years ago today, Count Leopold Von Berchtold signed his name to a 20-word manifesto—The World War was on!

That document, penned at Vienna, who's arms officers again are posing over their war maps, was an open declaration from the Austro-Hungarian minister of foreign affairs to the Serbian.

One of the shortest, mightiest messages of history, it hurched a hurricane of hatred which engulfed the world in a tidal wave of blood. It embroiled 27 nations, sacrificed many than 8,000,000 lives.

Two score years ago today, how ever no such disaster was dreamed of, by less expected.

Serbian hatred for Austrians had vented itself in the assassination of Archduke Ferdinand, heir to the Austro-Hungarian throne, and his wife. Austria long had wanted to control the Balkans.

The declaration of war read:

"The royal government of Servia (as Serbia was then known) lors manner to the note remitted not having replied in a satisfactied to it by the Austro-Hungarian minister in Belgrade on July 23, 1914, the Imperial and Royal Government finds itself compelled to proceed itself to safeguard its rights and interests and to have recourse for this purpose to force o' arms.

"Austria-Hungary considers itself therefore from this moment in a state of war with Servia."

Russia's mobilization to defend Serbia was seriously viewed, but correspondents cabled American newspapers that Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany probably could save world peace.

POLICE GUARD ENVOY IN ROME

By International News Service

Rome, July 28—A police cordon was thrown about the German embassy here today after crowds had gathered, apparently bent on a hostile demonstration.

Motion picture theater owners were advised not to show news reels in which Chancellor Hitler of Germany appeared after a demonstration in a leading theater last night when a picture of Hitler was roundly hooed.

Resentment against Germany, Hitler and Nazism in general has been whipped up by the Italian press since the assassination of Chancellor Dollfuss until all the good effects of the recent meeting between Hitler and Premier Mussolini at Venice have been utterly destroyed.

The newspaper attacks continued today, Messagero taunting Hitler with the fact that he had objected to foreign influence in Germany's domestic affairs, while permitting his Nazi colleagues to bring about civil war in Austria.

AUSTRIA HOLDS UP O. K. ON VON PAPEN AS NAZI ENVOY

By Associated Press

Berlin, July 28—Franz Von Papen, newly-appointed by Chancellor Hitler as minister to Austria, remained in Berlin today preparing for a departure to Vienna. This delay was a contradiction of rumors that he would attend the funeral of Engelbert Dollfuss this afternoon.

A reliable report said the Austrian government had not yet formally accepted his appointment. As Von Papen's home is a personal adjutant stated that the formal exchange of diplomatic credentials with the Austrian authorities had not been completed, but he indicated that everything was expected to be settled shortly.

Meanwhile, it was pointed out that it was impossible to decide on a definite time for his departure until these formalities were finished.

The new special envoy was at work at his desk early this morning with his personal staff dashing about, obviously preparing for their chief's quitting Berlin.

Transformed overnight from an unwanted fighting cock of internal politics to smooth the feathered bird of international affairs, Von Papen was again outwardly at peace with Chancellor Hitler.

After conferring with Hitler at Bayreuth, the conservative vice-chancellor flew back to Berlin.

His appointment was accepted enthusiastically both in the press and government circles as a strategic move by Hitler, and was believed to accomplish these aims:

1—Provide a closer bond between the German-speaking neighbors.

2—Demonstrate to the world Hitler's intention to preserve strict neutrality toward Austria.

3—Promote better relations through the Catholic minister between Nazis and Catholics.

4—Remove from the cabinet a non-Nazi who was a vigorous critic of some Nazi policies.

His new mission, which he accepted at once, rocketed Von Papen back into the public view, from which he had been slipping since reports that he would be forced out of the government followed the June 30 revolt.

3 BANDITS GET $2200 PAYROLL

then to headquarters and on to the air.

Reporters obtained full details of the crime before a radio-equipped car arrived on the scene, his despite headquarters' claim that Patrolman John Phelan was within a few blocks of the place all the time in a radio car.

Victims of the bandits were John Connors of Canton street, Sharon, superintendent of the company and driver of the pay roll car, and John Cullen of 714 Adams street, Dorchester.

They were returning from the Park Square branch of the First National Bank with the money.

As they drove into the garage, the three bandit followed from a car parked across the street.

Before Connors and Cullen could get out of the car, the gunmen were upon them. The leader shouted:

"Hands up! Give us the bag!"

He was content, however, to take the newspaper-wrapped money when he found there was no bag. His companions, meanwhile, also "covered" James Barry, who was working in the garage. The men were told:

"Now, you fellows stay where you are."

As the bandits made their way to their own car, Connors shouted:

"Get the number!"

Neither he, Barry nor Cullen, however, was able to see more than that it was a dealer's plate.

Thousands Pass Dollfuss Bier, Then March to His Grave

All Austria Swarms to Vienna for Funeral Under Army's Guns

Copyright, 1934, by Associated Press.

Vienna, July 28—Thousands of Dollfuss sympathizers, hoping for a last glimpse of the slain statesman before his funeral today, formed a long queue before the City Hall at 6 o'clock this morning, three hours before the time set for public admittance.

While these thousands waited patiently, 7000 members of the Heimwehr, mostly Dollfuss' comrades from the provinces, filed by the catafalque.

The doors to the "People's Hall" remained open until noon. It was estimated officially that 60,000 paid homage to the dead leader yesterday.

The masses ignored alternating hot sun and sporadic showers to stand in line many hours.

Sandwich men, with white coats and white aprons, served hot dogs, rolls and soft drinks.

EXCURSIONS FOR RITES

From the early hours today special trains poured peasants, small town citizens and people's deputations from Austria's large cities into the capital. To encourage the out-of-town homage the government offered half fare on all the railroads for all attending the funeral.

The trains brought countless floral tributes from organizations sending deputations.

The Mayor had ordered closure of all business houses at 3 p. m. (9 a. m. EST) along the line of march for the funeral cortege from the city hall to St. Stephens Cathedral and later to Hietzing Cemetery. Others had been ordered closed at 4:30 p. m., exception being made only for food stores.

Government offices closed at noon and the newspapers, by direction of the government, informed the populace exactly how the funeral procession would move.

ARMY LEADS WAY

The order placed the army at the head, the special guards of the dead chancellor next; then, 1000 members of youth organizations, 1000 representatives of the Volkbund, delegations representing various trades and callings and Catholic societies. Orders of the clergy were assigned to precede the coffin.

Nearest relatives were given the place immediately behind the coffin, followed by President Wilhelm Miklas of Austria.

Next, successively, special representatives of foreign powers, the diplomatic corps, state governments, army generals, federal, state and city officials, two battalions of infantry, three batteries of artillery, one battalion of police, a company of gendarmerie, last, a battalion of Heimwehrs.

Churches throughout Austria had been ordered to celebrate requiem mass at the hour of the Vienna exercises.

SCHARTON FEES $200,000 IN 2 YEARS

Listen, World! by ELSIE ROBINSON

Suppose you'd trained to be a musician. Then suddenly fallen head over heals in love with a farmer—and married and borne five children, quick as scat. Then suddenly, like a swift, cruel dream, saw your husband die—

Elsie Robinson

Leaving you with a swarm of helpless babies—

A load of debt—

A great, sprawling tract of half wild land, heavily mortgaged—

And no notion of doing anything more practical than playing Schubert's "Serenade"—

WHAT WOULD YOU DO?

A slender, bewildered, heart-broken young woman in Maryland faced those questions—

And answered them!

Answered them so bravely that she should put a song in the heart of every discouraged American citizen—and steel into his spine.

Remember that grand old picture of the three ragged men marching forward under a tattered flag—"THE SPIRIT OF '76"? Sure you do. And many a time you've thrilled to think that you belonged to their America.

Well, here's your chance to thrill again. This time it isn't three men, with all the power of a man's world surging behind them, and all the mad glory of a man's war skirling above them. This time it's one lone woman, breaking her own trail, waging her own war against a whole world in which there was not one encouraging voice, but many an unfriendly jeer.

It's often I've wanted to kick my sex on its silly, lazy, 'fraid-cat shin and wished to goodness I'd been born anything but a she. But reading Evelyn Harris' story has made me so proud to be a woman that I'm turning handsprings between these lines for sheer delight in her spunk.

And I'm the girl who knows what that spunk meant, being a rancher myself. A swell lot of slop they're printing these days about the delights of farming—and it certainly looks pretty in a frame.

But only the poor devil who's out rassling with the bugs and the gophers, the blights, the frosts, the droughts and the fires, not to metion taxes and commission merchants, knows what farm life really means—or costs.

Yet because the man she loved had loved those acres, and dreamed of his children living upon them, Evelyn Harris tackled the job—and saw it through. The mortgage is still unpaid, but only one child remains to be educated. And then—

SHE HAD HARDLY A DOLLAR IN CASH. SHE WAS NEVER TO KNOW WHERE THE MONEY FOR THE TAXES WAS TO COME FROM. BUT—

She traded berries for clothes—
Short ribs for shoes—
Pears for magazine subscriptions
Sweet corn for books—
Vegetables for schooling—
And MADE THE GRADE.

It's a grand book—"THE BARTER LADY"—and I'm hoping that the public thanks Doubleday Doran with plenty of kopeks for giving it to the world. For here at last is a real record by a real farmer—not the fanciful dreaming of some busted down club man, dictated between cocktails.

This woman wiped actual dirt from her hands and sweat from her brow before she sat down to whang the typewriter keys—and the tang of her honesty and courage rise strong from the simple, straightforward words.

Incidentally, those words pack a whale of a wallop at the way Big Business skins the farmers. Here's a typical passage:

"Once in a great while I find the time to stroll through a department store, simply to look at the things offered for sale. I noticed some blankets which looked a good bit like those made from our wool, except the tag on them did not give the size as large. I priced them and had a chat with the man in charge of the department.

"He talked frankly when I explained that I was a wool grower, and gave me some interesting figures. When I returned home and compared them, I found that every bit of the reduction was taken from the producer of the raw materials. The firm making the blankets had not lowered their charges, nor had the transportation lines.

"Likewise, prices of milk were reduced to the consumer, and every penny, so far as I could learn, was taken from the man under the cow."

And you haven't heard the half. Skip a few chocolate sundaes and a couple of movies and get that book. It will give you something that will keep you busy thinking for many a day.

FIGHT ON TAX IN 1926-27 IS RENEWED

Settlement in du Pont Case Netted Big Sum to Boston Lawyer

After the government argued late yesterday that William R. Scharton, Faber defense counsel, had received fees totaling more than $200,000 in 1926 and 1927, and after the debonair lawyer had admitted he was making so much money in those days that $2000 was a mere trifle, hearing on his petition for an income tax abatement once more got under way in the Federal building today.

Scharton's plea is being heard by Commissioner Charles P. Smith, of the United States Board of Tax Appeals, with Francis R. Shearer acting as government attorney.

BIG DU PONT FEES

Most of Scharton's fees during the fat years came from his connection with the DuPont case, it was brought out, as he testified. The lawyer acted for the late Mrs. William duPont, of the Delaware industrialists, in obtaining a trust fund of $1,800,000 and $70,000 for lawyers' fees from her husband.

Scharton said he was brought into the case as attorney for Mrs. duPont of Wilmington, Del., at the suggestion of Captain George Zinn, her son, whom he described as "a gentleman sportsman, polo player, swimmer, hard drinker and spendthrift."

BONDS HELD IN TRUST

The lawyer testified he was instrumental in effecting a settlement, for which he was to have received a $100,000 fee. Shearer then brought up the matter of $50,000 in duPont bonds and argued that Scharton should have listed them in his income tax return.

The lawyer, however, pointed out that the bonds had been given to him in trust by Mrs. du Pont, to be held by him until such a time as she obtained payment for his legal services from her husband. Under these circumstances, Scharton said he had been advised by an income tax expert not to include them in his report.

U. S. AGENT BLAMED

In his abatement petition, Scharton asks the return of $36,666 imposed by the government as a deficiency tax and penalty on his 1926-27 earnings. Scharton said yesterday that he had received only $20,000 out of the du Pont case.

He blamed his present predicament on John Glutsch, special agent attached to the Federal Income Tax Bureau here, and said that it was through this man's efforts that he had been indicted by a federal grand jury for tax evasion.

The lawyer declared that Glutsch had intimated that he had received $40,000 out of the Victor Searles case, when, as a matter of fact, he got but $28,000.

$8000 CHECK RETURNED

It was the Government's idea to get an indictment against him at all costs, Scharton said he had been informed, because it was felt that such action would cause many minor delinquents to pay up.

He said it was Glutsch who caused the return of a check for more than $8000 he had tendered in payment of his tax. He also said that he had been promised an opportunity to appear before the grand jury and that this was revoked on orders from Washington.

Scharton pleaded the statute of limitations against the indictment and was upheld by the late Federal Judge James A. Lowell and later by the United States Supreme Court.

MacDonald Tours Annapolis Valley

Halifax, July 28—Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald of Great Britain and his daughter Ishbel arrived here, having completed their motor tour through the Annapolis valley.

While in Halifax they are guests of Lieutenant Governor W. H. Covert and Mrs. Covert at Government House.

Sprig of Flowers and Pin Make Art Ball 'Dressy'

It usually takes a lot to shock Provincetown, but the art colony's jungle ball gave 'em a gas;. One of the sensations of the ball was Miss Merle Bohaer, portrait painter, who had donned a gaily-colored table cloth and stuck a breastpin in it, to assume the role of "A Tahitian Virgin."

Miss Theodora Peck, New York society girl, who plays ingenue leads in the Wharf Theater, was stunning as "The Shipwrecked Girl." She wore short shorts, a bandana and a sprig of honeysuckle.

BORDER CROSSING DENIED

Reports that Italian troops had already crossed the frontier into Carinthia, Austria, where fighting is underway, were emphatically denied.

(Such unconfirmed reports were received yesterday at Belgrade.)

The declaration of Prince Ernst von Starhemberg, head of the Austrian government, in Vienna last night that no concessions which infringe Austrian liberty would be made to Naziism was received here with strong applause.

Starhemberg's pledge to follow faithfully policies of the late Chancellor Dollfuss is viewed as particularly reassuring, coming as it did after announcement that Franz von Papen, Germany's vice-chancellor, would be sent to Vienna in a peace gesture.

HITLER IS ATTACKED

The authoritative newspaper Popolo de Roma, called Hitler's letter appointing Von Papen "one of the most singular diplomatic documents of our times," printing today a scathing attack on Hitler, who only a few weeks ago was Mussolini's guest in Venice.

"In Italy and Europe we all know that since the day the Nazis took power the Reich has been involved in the internal Austrian question," the paper said. "Now we hear to our astonishment that der Fuehrer (Hitler) knew nothing about it.

"Der Fuehrer was unaware what his lieutenants plotted, what Nazi newspapers printed and what German radio stations broadcast. Truly, never before has the right hand been so thoroughly ignorant of what the left hand was doing."

The paper declares Hitler either went back on promises not to interfere in Austrian affairs or was unable to maintain them.

"We in Italy," the newspaper concludes, "hold the world has need of dictators, but we do not mean dictators who lie nor dictators who have no power."

GAY PARTY AT ART BALL

Provincetown, July 28—The Beachcombers Club gave its "Jungle Ball" last night with many artists and a gay crowd present.

The girls were dressed in colorful and original costumes. There was a Tahitian maiden in the person of Miss Bohner, who vied with Theodora Peck of New York in her scanty attire. The latter was dressed as a shipwreck victim.

Miss Helen Lader of New York won the prize for her costume. It was made from cellophane. Coulton Waugh, an artist, gave a South Sea cannibal impersonation and Harry Finmark of Santiago attended as an African Chief.

Richard Miller, National Academy portrait painter, was "present" for the occasion.

DILLINGER DAD GOES ON STAGE

By Associated Press

Indianapolis, July 28—John Dillinger, Sr., 70, the Mooresville, Ind., farmer, whose son led a gang credited with obtaining $500,000 in bank robberies, is going on the stage because he needs money.

His first appearance will be in a theater here tomorrow. He celebrated his 70th birthday Friday.

With him, capitalizing on the notorious exploits of his outlaw son, who was buried here last Wednesday, will be another son, Hubert Dillinger, and a daughter and son-in-law, Mrs. Audrey Hancock, and Emmett Hancock.

A few days ago the elder Dillinger expressed concern over how he was to pay for the expenses of the funeral. Neighbors in the Mooresville community, where he is a respected church member, were reported considering a present of funds.

However, he decided the stage offer might provide a means of paying his bills.

Ted Nicholas, manager of a local vaudeville house which has been exhibiting motion pictures in recent months, announced the engagement of the Dillinger relatives. In six appearances a day, Nicholas said, they will be interviewed in regard to John's life, especially his visit home last April 8, while he was the object of a widespread search by police.

TWO ATTACKED BY PROWLER

Mrs. Gertrude Langill, 72, of Montvale avenue, Woburn, and Andrew Ericson, 68, of the same address, were under the care of a physician today, following an early morning encounter with a burglar.

Mrs. Langill told police a colored man entered her room while she was asleep. She screamed. The prowler seized her by the throat to quiet her, but unsuccessful, ran from the room. The landlord, Ericson, awakened by the woman's screams, took up the chase. He cornered and grappled with the fugitive on a rear porch and Ericson was struck with a "blackjack" and was stunned.

Patrolmen Edward Reil and John F. McCarthy arrested Alfred Nelson, 27, colored, Garfield avenue, Woburn, on charges of assault with intent to murder. Ericson identified Nelson. He was held in $15,000.

O. O. McIntyre NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

NEW YORK, July 28—Purely personal piffle: Boyville's saddest hour—when cows are driven home at dusk. Harold Ross eats up a cigarette in quick lightning-like puffs. Joe Cook's closest friend is Raymond Schindler, private detective. On two occasions I've grappled with clothes racks in dark halls.

O. O. McIntyre

Leo Newman rids his ticket agency of loafers by sprinkling ammonia on the floor. Bernard Baruch, for one, came out of Wall Street without stains. Hal Phyfe's studio comes nearest to the informality of a Left Bank salon. The only stranger to look totally unlike my mental picture was Hal Roach.

What became of the fellows who used to say, "Hey, Cul!" When Vernon Castle entered public dining rooms, he'd throw his polo coat on the hall floor and his police dog would stretch on it. I saw no mention that Hal Skelly was once a choir boy.

I used to freeze all the neighbors' ice cream just to lick the dashers. Flying into a rage, I long for DeWolf Hopper's voice. Mine squeaks. Norma Shearer has the sprucest, slicked-uppiness of screen stars. Simile: As dry as Helen Jacob's smile. I love to hear Phyllis Seeman laugh.

When Ziegfeld, who never drank, fagged with office routine he'd spray the room with expensive perfume. An evening to record: Eddie Peabody is dropping over soon with his banjo to play all the tunes I suggest. Amon Carter is America's most earnest civic booster. Why do all the wonder kiddies of the films fizzle out in maturity? When I catch a big column blunder, my throat goes ash dry. If it hadn't been for Benedict Arnold, it would be a grand first name.

I drove up to the entrance of a nudist colony in Germany with Karl Kitchen for a visit. And then turned and skedaddled like everything. "Legs" Diamond and Arnold Rothstein were the only underworld figures I ever knew on sight. About six different men have been pointed out as Owney Madden. Dandy book: "Holy Deadlock," by A. P. Herbert.

Every time I mention Chaplin, a dozen regulars inquire why he does not take out citizenship papers. I like to answer the back door bell, watch Herbert Swope dash into a room and hear Irvin Cobb accent the "po" in policeman. My wife can spot a phoney, man or woman, at a glance. She never misses. Harry Beaumont does the dandiest imitation of George Primrose's soft shoe dance. Roy W. Howard once wrote a photo caption "Petite Little Dancer," but he got along all right.

When I get out on a limb writing a column I take a pen and pencil to an arm chair across the room and finish it whim-wham. Emily Vanderbilt Whitfield can write her first name with two quick strokes of the pen so nobody can read it. Gene Crawley's letters to me usually bear the return address, "Adele de Vere, The Red Garter Girls, On Tour." Nice scandal for the help. Never knew a happily retired business or professional man. There are exactly 17 versions of the Astor-Gillespie row and it would not interest me if all were correct. Nothing describes a four-flushing gesture like the Chinese phrase, "making face."

Richard Mansfield's intonations and postures would be classed as cheap theatricals today. Two syndicate associates are honored the same week—Michigan University makes V. V. McNitt a Master of Arts and Kentucky gives Albert Payson Terhune a colonelship. I continue a leading member of the Madison Avenue Pants Pressing Club. I can't stop pronouncing the name of the tight wire expert, Con Collino.

Stories about Jimmy Walker's nostalgia for his dear old New York are assinine. I can never get rid of bores. G. K. Chesterton says bores always attract bores. My enthusiasm for Leslie Howard on the screen has gone wishy-washy. Although once my favorite performer. Just another of the fickle public. But I'm faithful to Shirley Temple in my fashion. Cincinnati had more glamour for me than any American city. John Horgan couldn't get an airplane from Dayton, O., of all places, for New York recently.

Blood red finger nails give me the ork-orks. I like to dine and sleep on yachts only when they're anchored, can't wade through an Edgar Wallace mystery and never lunched at the Algonquin. That waltz tune they play for ice skating acts always makes me want to glide. The Nijinsky in me!

POPE BLESSES U. S. PILGRIMS

By Associated Press

Vatican City, July 28—Pope Pius today told 250 American Pilgrims he hoped they would be able to continue their pilgrimage to the Passion Play at Oberammergau in an indirect allusion to the troubled Austro-German conditions. He said:

"I hope that you can effect your proposal to see this pious spectacle."

He then passed on immediately to impart his blessing to the Pilgrims, to their families, and to "your great and beloved country."

CAMERA COVERS DEVELOPMENTS IN AUSTRIA'S CIVIL WAR

HEIMWEHRS MARCH ON—The Austrian government feverishly prepares for the defense of Vienna and its country. Heavy cordons of Fascist Heimwehr troops are placed about important buildings in the capital city. The camera snapped as Heimwehr troops paraded around a training camp in recent drill hours.

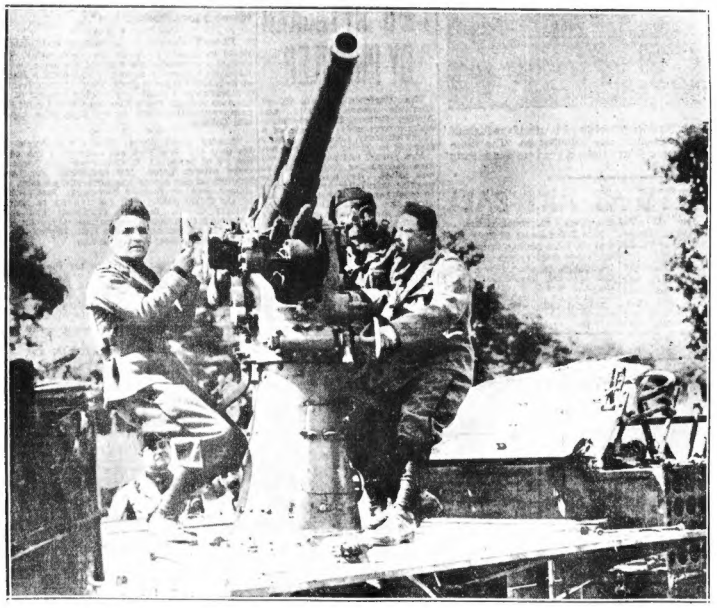

WAR AND MUSIC—Will the Austrian forces be going back to dugouts soon? Here are a group of officers taken during the World War on one of the Austrian front lines. Such as these are now on either side of the divided Austria. They are enjoying a musical hour. When this picture was taken, Austria was in trouble almost as bad as the present revolution, yet the fighting troops were able to sing and play between hours spent in busy fighting. Such scenes are typical of the Austrian warriors. (Picture from International News Photograph Service.)

Hitler of Austria making a fiery speech to his followers is Alfred Frauenfeld, foremost Nazi of Austria, who is called the "Hitler of Austria." Like "Handsome Adolf" he is an exceptionally good orator. He is much in the spotlight in the present civil war. (Picture from International News Photograph Service.)

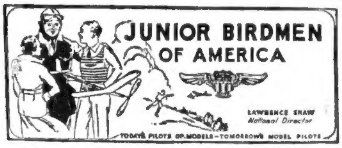

THIS COULD BE REAL—A gun crew from Italy's finest Fascisti (Black Shirt) Army during a regular army manoeuver outside of Rome. Such equipment—plus naval power—planes and infantry are near at hand to carry out the dictates of Mussolini that "Hands Off Austria" must be the order of the day. This bit of light artillery was picking out the targets on an Italian range when this photograph was made. (Picture from International News Photograph Service.)

AUSTRIAN HOME DEFENDERS—Barbed wire entanglements—machine guns placed atop Vienna buildings—are included in the defense of Vienna. The Austrian Home Defenders are shown in this picture as they appeared in a festival review in Vienna. This is no doubt the type of barrier now used with many other forms, as the city is being guarded in the battle against Nazi influences. (Picture from International News Photograph Service.)

June Hamilton, 11 of 12 Hammond street, Natick, whose number is 2084, and John Augis, 13, of 46 Beacon street, Clinton, whose number is 573, are the winners of the second week's Funnybone Contest and will each receive a new one dollar bill as their prize.

Here is June's entry:

Aviator: "Where did Ella Vator go?"

Aviatrix: "I dunno, but she wanted Al t' meet her."

And this is the entry that won for John:

Lloyd: "Certainly I'm going to be an aviator. I've been airminded for years."

Floyd: "Well, I guess I'd better report to a garage. I've been tow-headed since birth."

And before these members even receive their cash prizes, we are launched on the third week's contest with two more Junior Birdmen to get one dollar each next week. So keep on sending in your aviation jokes.

Lawson Mitchell

Here is a welcome surprise for you and one which is designed to make you take even a greater interest in the Funnybone competition.

In addition to the $1 each to be given two winners each week, ten pairs of tickets to the Tremont theater on Tremont street, will be awarded to the runners-up. This means that even if you don't win one of the cash prizes you have a chance to go to this movie free and take a friend or relative with you.

And that isn't all the glad news. As the guest of Samuel L. Richmond, the manager, you will get to see "Young Eagles," a new thrilling serial of two Boy Scouts who fly to South America and there become involved in a series of adventures that test their courage and strength. This movie is shown each Saturday and Sunday, in addition to the feature pictures, and the winners of the tickets can go on either of these days.

Read Monday's column for further announcement on the opportunity to see this exciting picture.

The Funnybone Contest rules are very simple. All you need do is send the best aviation jokes you can find to Junior Birdmen headquarters, 100 Summer street, Boston. Send as many as you like.

Only Junior Birdmen or Junior Birdwomen are eligible. One boy who lives in Harwichport, would have won this week with the joke he sent in but he is not a member of the Junior Birdmen yet.

Remember this as it is important. Don't become discouraged if your jokes do not win the first time you send them in. They might fail to win one week and yet be the best ones submitted later.

Next week's winners will be announced on Wednesday in order that we may mail to the runners-up their free ticket to the Tremont theater.

McCaffrey, 18; Anna McCaffrey, 13; Leo Doyle, 17, of 626 Cummins highway; Ruth Iverson, 12, of 26 Pleasant View street; William Foley, 10, of 587 Cummins highway; William and Walter Johnson, 10 and 11, 33 Pierce street.

A New Idea for Camp Fire Girls

We were talking to a woman who had been a counsellor of a Camp Fire group the other day. She was bewailing the fact that she no longer was able to continue her work—and why? Well she'd been reading all about this Junior Birdmen organization and thinking how wonderfully its aims, and activities could be incorporated in the Camp Fire group. She believes an arrangement could be made so that the telling of six aviation stories, the making of a model airplane, or an explanation of the duties of an air hostess, etc., would each earn for the owner extra honor beads—and of course, there are the wings to wear, too.

Doesn't that give you flocks of new ideas? Why not act on them and bring something new into your group?

New members to join the Writers' Club, that service which is going to furnish its members with the names and addresses of Birdmen in other cities and states so they can interchange ideas through letters, are John Driscoll, 12, of 1427 Cambridge street, Cambridge; Ernest J. Hemeon, 15, of 217 Emerald street, Malden and Frederick Mackey, 15, of 18 Balfour street, Roxbury. If you wish to join, just send in your name and address to headquarters. There's no fee attached.

Questions and Answers Box

William E. Morrison of Orange, Mass.—We do not edit any letters or news to send to members other than the daily column in the Boston American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser. However, you can have the Boston American sent to you six days a week for three months for $1.50.

Bertha Jenkins of 81 Business street, Hyde Park—You may replace your wings by sending in a notice saying you have lost them and enclosing 10 cents for a new pair. The East Boston airport tells us that flights of five or six minutes cost from $1.50 to $5.00 depending upon the operator. No physical examination is required. We can't imagine where you got that information.

The Eagle examination probably will include questions on the dictionary lists. Sorry we missed you on Navy Day.

Send your sister's name, age, and address in to headquarters with 10c and we will enroll her.

Albert Le Count, of 7 Bent Terrace, Quincy—We think it very probable that we will have articles on how to fly. But we don't know how soon. Watch the column for announcements.

The Junior Birdman whose picture appears today is Lawson Mitchell, 14, of 338 Doric avenue, Cranston, R. I.

SWIM STAR LOOMS AS MRS. DALL'S "NEXT"

RENO REPORTS NAME CYRUS WASHBURN

Washington, July 28—The latest nominee to succeed Curtis Dall as the husband of the President's daughter Anna was supposed to be Cyrus Washburn, former California swimming star, reports from Reno informed socialites here today.

Washburn has just been divorced. Mrs. Dall is due to get her freedom early next week, according to the court slate.

NOT CERTAIN YET

Of course nothing was absolutely certain about the alleged match. Previously the mother of "Sistie" and "Buzzie" was supposed to be in love with a Washington newspaper correspondent.

Then a son of a Nebraska Democratic power was named. Finally, with the news of her frequent visits to the Pyramid Lake ranch resort where Washburn is manager, came the story that he was the lucky man.

All-seeing neighbors of the couple have seen them together a lot of times, they said. Long automobile and horseback jaunts were usually in order.

TO FILE SOON

On some of these occasions, it was said that Mrs. Dall wore "shorts." This was a surprise because the Presidential daughter has always been regarded as very conservative in her attire.

Her mother was in Reno a short time ago, spending some time with the second Roosevelt divorcee.

Mrs. Dall's six-week residence period is up on Monday and it is believed that she will go ahead with her separation plea then.

STRATOSPHERE BALLOON UP

massed on the natural grandstand above the bowl waiting throughout the night to witness the ascent. Many drove hundreds of miles to the flight camp and a traffic jam resulted.

The crowd cheered when the craft cleared the tile walls of the bowl. There had been some fear it might crash at the takeoff. Weather conditions were perfect, visibility good and gorund winds low. The weather map indicated similar conditions 400 to 800 miles southeast where the balloon was expected to drift.

HAVE FUR LINED SUITS

The last articles placed in the gondola were ful lined suits for use in the bitter cold of the stratosphere.

The men took a few cans of beans, oranges, bullion, and four gallons of drink water.

Three airplanes followed the balloon, one carrying balloon riggers, who will atempt to be on hand when the balloon descends.

Balloon Drops 2000 Feet After Heavy List

Washington, July 28 (AP)—Short wave radio messages received at the National Geographic Society headquarters here shortly after 9 a. m. (E. S. T.) placed the height of the stratosphere balloon at 14,000 feet.

This was a drop from 16,000 feet reported a few moments before, when one of the balloon's crew sent the terse message:

"We had a hell of a list."

Officials here said the height was according to schedule as the balloon was to level off at around 15,000 feet to test the valves.

Headquarters of the society and the army, joint sponsors of the flight, kept in touch with the balloon through direct short wave radio.

6 of Train's 8 Victims Buried

Shelton, Conn., July 28 (INS)—Sadness descended upon this town today as funerals were held for six of the eight children killed beneath a freight train Thursday. The other two will be buried tomorrow.

The children were seated on tracks of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad playing a game of cards and although warned of their danger by the crew of another freight train, they failed to leave the tracks.

New Hampshire Lifts Forest Ban

Concord, N. H., July 28 (AP)—Removal of the ban closing woods in seven counties because of fire hazzard was announced today by the Forestry Department. Officials said heavy rains had decreased the hazzard caused by one of the most severe dry spells recorded by the department.

Cavalry Ride 'Iron Horse' On to Devens

On to Fort Devens went the 110th Cavalry, of the Massachusetts State Guard, this morning. The only military state command on horses will do a two-weeks tour of encampment duty. They left from North Station. Members of Troop F, of the cavalry organization posed on the engine that pulled the train to the encampment grounds at Ayer.

N. E. National Guard Units Entrain for Camp Duty

Many New England national guard units, including two Massachusetts regiments, departed today for their annual training encampments.

The 241st Massachusetts coast artillery regiment, 869 officers and men, left from the South armory on Irvington street here and from armories in Chelsea, New Bedford and Fall River for Fort H. G. Wright, off New London, Ct. Colonel Harry G. Skinner of Fall River commands the regiment.

The Boston units, in command of Lieutenant-Colonel William D. Cottam of West Roxbury, with the Chelsea battery, marched to the Back Bay station and boarded a train for Providence, where they were to concentrate before proceeding by rail to New London. There they will board army boats which will take them to Fort Wright.

The 11th Cavalry of 385 officers and men under Colonel Percival C. Lewis of Reading, another Bay State regiment, also moved today. Its destination is Fort Devens.

The regiment that entrained at the North Station for Ayer, with 200 horses, will arrive at Fort Devens from Niantic today. During the past fortnight, the regiment's horses have been in use by the 122d Connecticut cavalry, which completes its encampment work today.

10 MISSING IN SHIP BLAST

By Associated Press

Halifax, N. S., July 28—Ten fishermen were believed killed today by an explosion aboard the Lunenburg schooner Astrid W., off the coast of Nova Scotia.

First word of the distaster came by wireless from the Danish steamship Aissund, the captain of which said the majority of the schooner's crew was aboard his vessel, but that ten were missing.

"Ancients" Plan Ottawa Meeting

Ottawa, July 28—Twelve officers of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Boston, oldest military organization in the United States, arrived here today to make arrangements for their annual Field Day to be held here September 29 and October 1. More than 2000 members with many prominent guests are expected to attend the Field Day activities.

FLAMES PERIL 300 HOMES

Pasadena, Cal., July 28—All residents of the Arroyo Seco district, north of Altadena, were ordered to evacuate their homes here because of the menacing spread of a brush fire raging out of control a few miles north.

Damage was estimated unofficially at more than $2,500,000. Two thousand men sought to stem the advance. Speeded along by a northeasterly wind the fire was roaring up scenic Mount Lowe.

About 300 cottages were in the path of the flames. Some had been destroyed. Forest rangers said there was no immediate danger of loss of life. Thirty-eight fire fighters, most of them CCC workers, were being treated for injuries. The fire fighters had to work in relays because of the intense heat.

Maine Sportsmen Protest Duck Ban

Augusta, Me., July 28—Maine sportsmen hope appeals to President Roosevelt will halt promulgation of proposed migratory bird shooting regulations which would sanction shooting only Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays for 10 consecutive weeks. The present restrictions permit hunting every day for two months.

ELY ERA BLAST TO GOVERNORS STIRS STATE

Reverberations of Governor Ely's latest attack against the "New Deal" sounded throughout the state today.

The governor struck the note that the government is becoming so paternalistic that it is on the way to socialism. He was addressing the chief executives of about one-third of the states of the Union gathered at Mackinac Island, Michigan.

Governor Ely declared that a people "made happy, contented and prosperous by the rugged individualism of the past" are being dominated by the federal bureaus.

END NRA, HE SAYS

His particular charge was against the NRA. He said:

"Unless we want a socialistic state, the NRA should be modified or eliminated.

"The present paternalistic government has no stopping place short of a Hitler regime."

Governor Ely said he was sure the Eastern states wanted no state enforcement legislation. When he apologized for his "old fashioned viewpoint," Governor W. L. Cross of Connecticut stated that he, too, was old-fashioned.

RUM BLAST ANSWERED

The attack made by Joseph H. Choate, Jr., chairman of the Federal Alcohol Control Administration, on the state monopoly system of liquor control was answered by Frank Picard, chairman of the Michigan Liquor Control Commission.

Choate declared that a state liquor store system, if it is to combat the bootlegger effectively must involve an impracticable number of stores and a huge army of state employes. This army he said not only would constitute a formidable political machine but also would be subject to graft and corruption.

Picard voiced a strenuous disagreement with Choate's belief and said that if there is one danger to be faced it is the danger that insidious propaganda from the wine and liquor industries and the big wholesale houses will prevent the state monopoly system from being effective.

ROOSEVELT ON WAY BACK TO U. S.

By Associated Press

Honolulu, July 28 — President Roosevelt says "aloha" to Hawaii today.

The President prepared for his return to continental United States enthused by the hearty welcome of the island and impressed by the military and civilian development of the territory.

Before returning to the cruiser Houston the President prepared to say and hear "aloha"—Hawaii's pleasant "hello, good-bye and you are welcome out here again." As at every turn, Hawaiians were present at the dock with their guitars, ukuleles and melodious voices.

Roosevelt passed over the incident of a frightened horse which just missed his open car in a wild plunge into the automobile procession from Pearl Harbor naval base yesterday. The horse struck the second car behind the President's. Washington newspapermen, in the car, were slightly cut by broken glass.

Sunburned and tanned, the President and his sons, Franklin and John, were ready for a new fishing try today far out from the Hawaiian shore.

ADD TO JUDGES

Nine judges will sit in when the coming "Hollywood Hotel" audition finals for zone No. 2 are held at Yankee Network studios in the Hotel Buckminster on Aug. 7. This means adding four individuals to the present board of judges, which this week selected Alice O'Leary to be the Boston radio "Cinderella" and compete with young ladies from 14 other Eastern cities. The judges who heard more than 300 contestants here were comprised of Marie Stoddard, well known local dramatic and voice tutor; Roy L. Harlow, assistant to the president of the Yankee Network; Hy Fine, musical director for Public Theaters; Lloyd Greene, radio editor, and Mrs. Imogene Wolcott, prominent Boston advertising agency executive.

$40,000 LOSS IN SUGAR FIRE

Nearly two million pounds of partly refined sugar was destroyed when a two-alarm fire swept the main storage warehouse of the Revere Sugar Refinery at 33 Medford street, Charlestown, today, with loss estimated at $40,000.

The fire was discovered by William Epps, night watchman at the warehouse, who sent in the first alarm. A second alarm, summoning aid from Boston and two fireboats, was ordered as the fire threatened the entire building.

More than 75 employes aided in fighting the flames as they arrived for work.

The place stored large amounts of sugar in boxes, barrels and bags, nearly all of it was ruined. What the fire missed, the streams of water spoiled.

Many employes and several firemen escaped serious injury when a heavy roof beam collapsed.

NEW FILMS AT METROPOLITAN AND STATE -:- CAROLE LOMBARD TAKES INGENUE LEAD

Gem Mystery With Plenty of Comedy

By JOYCE DANA

There are tricks in all trades as anyone may discover at the Metropolitan, where "The Notorious Sophie Lang," Paramount's film story of a charming lady raffles opened yesterday.

Sophie's tricks are many and her trade but one, that of maintaining her supremacy as the smartest of jewel thieves. Her pride in her profession is only surpassed by her beauty, and both lead her into most intricate difficulties, from which she escapes with all the ease of the late Houdini from a straitjacket.

Gertrude Michael

After deluging two bewildered gentlemen in a Maiden Lane jeweler's shop with tear gas and escaping through a cordon of police lines by commandeering an ambulance, Sophie sets her heart on the most valuable string of pearls in Manahattan. These priceless jewels are likewise the objective of her European rival, one Maximillian Bernard, who has paved the way for leading the field in thievery in New York by posing as Sir Nigel Crane, a wealthy Englishman whose hobby ostensibly is criminology.

It is Sophie who reaches the scene first, deftly removes the pearls and repairs to "Sir Nigel's" hotel with her dear old Aunt Nellie. Sophie manages to meet the gentleman crook and thereafter it is a battle of wits and wills between them and the entire New York police department as to who wins.

Plenty of comedy has been injected, with the idea perhaps that you won't take the film too seriously.

Gertrude Michael has the role of the lady the police are looking for, bringing good looks and what little acting is required to the part. Looking much more the distinguished Sir Nigel than a candidate for the rogue's gallery, Paul Cavanagh is sleek and handsome as Max. The comedy goes to Alison Skipworth and Leon Errol, and needless to say they make the most of it.

On the stage are Olive and George Brasno, headlining with Buster Shaver in another of the colorful and pretentious musical revues. The midget pair are topnotchers in the entertainment world, and despite their diminutive size, they get away with some decidedly grown-up doings-on. Ray Saxe, who out-Cooks Joe himself at doing a whole lot of things at the same time, plays the saxophone while tap dancing, swinging a lariat and a couple of other things, while the Three Bredwins in sensational tumbling and Allen & Kent in taps and turns are all featured with the Elida Ballet. Pablo, South America's foremost magician, manipulates cigarettes, cards and newspapers before your very eyes in a way that you won't believe.

Virginia Bruce Appealing in Crinolines

By HARRIS MORGAN

All is sweetness and light at Loew's State Theater, where "Jane Eyre," one of the most beloved and familiar of the classics, has been brought to the screen by Monogram Pictures.

Virginia Bruce, erstwhile wife of John Gilbert, returns to the screen in the role of the gentle heroine of the Charlotte Bronte story of the little English orphan who grew up and found the road to true love a rocky one.

Set in the days of candle-light and curtsies, the film has been handsomely mounted, for the most part at Thornfield, where Jane is governess to the mischievous and lovable Adele. Here "Mr." Rochester—for no one dreamed of being more familiar in those days—presided over a pretentious household, concerned chiefly with his little niece and with the welfare of the poor imbecile imprisoned in an isolated room whose heart-rending cries often ring through the night.

Virginia Bruce

Admiration grows to love between Jane and Mr. Rochester, which was quite as it should have been. Once Rochester has ended his affair with Lady Blanche, the way to his heart's desire is open, but on the eve of his marriage to Jane, his insane wife escapes from her guardians and Jane, learning the truth, flees.

How she engages in missionary work, and almost enters a loveless marriage, and how she and her adored Mr. Rochester are at length re-united, is such an old and loved tale that all but the youngest generation of moviegoers will know the ending.

Miss Bruce is more than appealing in the crinolines and curls of the era. Her blonde beauty is somewhat reminiscent of Ann Harding, but hers is a younger and more spirited charm. Colin Clive does well by the somewhat stiff and proper Rochester, who loved long before he told and kept a lady in suspense for so many anguished hours.

A most engaging performance is given by little Edith Fellowes as Adele, a far different type than the usual Hollywood youngster, looking delightfully old-fashioned and getting off her sometimes stilted lines with plenty of conviction. John Rogers handles the role of Sam Poole with good effect, Beryl Mercer plays Mrs. Fairfax and Aileen Pringle makes Lady Blanche not nearly as disagreeable a person as she was in the story.

On the same program is the ever popular Mickey Mouse in the strangest adventures he's yet had, called "Gulliver Mickey."

Lawsuit Threat Changes Mind of Star in Dispute About 'Orchids and Onions' Part

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Los Angeles, July 28—Rather than face a law suit, Carole Lombard says she has decided to play the role selected for her in "Orchids and Onions." She was told that unless she accepted the ingenue lead, Columbia and Paramount would be involved in a law suit and that she might be kept off the screen for six months.

So Carole moves to Columbia studios Monday and when she finishes she comes back to Paramount August 20 for the Arthur Somers Roche play, "The Case Against Mrs. Ames." Lee Tracy will be her vis a vis in the Roche play in one of his typical reporter roles. I spent yesterday afternoon with May Robson at Columbia while she was getting her costumes ready for "Orchids and Onions." Her role is one of the best she has had since "Lady for a Day."

Paul Lukas can feel that he didn't get the lead in "Imitation of Life" without having plenty of competition. Claudette Colbert has been in the picture for four weeks without so much as a leading man. Dozens and dozens of tests were made without one of them solving the problem. Suddenly Junior Laemmle, who had agreed to let Lukas go to another studio, had him make a test for "Imitation of Life" and Lukas was immediately informed that he must stay on the home lot for this highly important picture.

One of the very last persons to be photographed with the assassinated Austrian Premier Dollfuss was Carl Laemmle, Sr. Less than a week ago Uncle Carl was the guest of honor at a dinner given him by the Austrian government. Dollfuss presided and Carl, Jr., received enthusiastic cables from his father, who is now in Carlsbad taking the cure. Both Junior and Rosabelle (Mrs. Stanley Bergerman) have cabled their father to leave Europe and come home.

Los Angeles merchants should give Warner Brothers a vote of thanks. Verree Teasdale, who went to New York to buy her trousseau, was called back before she had time to so much as buy a hairpin. So she'll do her shopping at home now. She's on her way here, arriving today with the script of "The Fire Bird" for company. She will read it en route, getting herself in readiness to begin work this coming Monday. Anita Louise plays the second feminine lead—that of Miss Teasdale's daughter in "The Fire Bird," having won this role through her work in "Du Barry."

Jack Haley is a generous soul, I must say. He won a thousand dollars on a bet at the six-day bike races and promptly handed $500 to Felix La Fenetre and Geary May, winners of the race. Sarah Y. Mason and Victor Heerman started on a vacation and turned right around and came back. They signed a new one-year contract with Radio, which goes into effect as soon as they finish "David Copperfield" on the MGM lot. This is an interesting thought. Eva Le Gallienne has told friends that she wants to direct pictures. She will spend considerable time on the Warner brothers set with her friend, Josephine Hutchinson, to get pointers on how directors are made. A conversation between Lee Morrison in Hollywood and Buster Keaton in Paris cinched a London contract for the solemn-faced comedian.

Snapshots of Hollywood

Young ALFRED VANDERBILT, host at a gorgeous dinner at the Ambassador hotel on the eve of his departure for home; all the younger set, TOBY WING, LOUISE LATTIMER, SALLY BLANE, POLLY ANN YOUNG guests at this very swanky affair; LAURA HOPE CREWES giving a cocktail party to the members of the Theatre Guild now in Hollywood at her home Monday; ESTELLE TAYLOR having tea with MRS. HARRY COHN; ANATOLE FRIEDLAND being given a gra-a-nd farewell party by EDGAR ALLAN WOOLF; IDA KOVERMAN and ROBERT VIGNOLA, BENNY THAW and EDDIE MANNIX doing a rave over a sea food concoction created by the culinary-minded Mr. Woolf; EDDIE GOULDING and LAURA HOPE CREWES among the very last to leave the party; they preferred to talk while BEBE DANIELS, ALICE GLAZER, ROSABELLE LAEMMLE BERGERMAN playing bridge; SIGMUND ROMBERG playing the piano divinely; ROSIE DOLLY NETCHER wild about the Hungarian songs she remembered from her children; VIRGINIA BRUCE sick with the flu; MRS. AD SCHULBERG entertaining a few friends at Malibu for Sunday luncheon; MARIAN MARSH escorted by GLENN AUSTIN, polo player, to a cafe; SIDNEY HOWARD and his wife, the former POLLY DAMROSCH dining out, and, of all things, holding hands.

Doctor Kay

Many Stars in Musical

It seems that "Life Begins at 8:40," the first big musical production of the season, won its unique title because Lee Shubert decided to take his "Ziegfeld Follies" of last season on tour this autumn. If Mr. Shubert had not made this decision, "Life Begins at 8:40" would have been another edition of "Ziegfeld Follies."

Bert Lahr, Ray Bolger, Frances Williams and Luella Gear are the chief performing attractions of the new revue, which starts Boston's season next Thursday. Brian Donlevy, Dixie Dunbar, Earl Oxford, Josephine Huston, Ofelia and Pimento, Jack Starr and the Charles Weidman dancers are others in the long list of principals. There are said to be 70 beauties in the chorus.

Ronald Colman's New Screen Hit Tops Orpheum Bill

Roland Colman, as dashing and debonair as ever, stars on the screen at Loew's Orpheum in "Bulldog Drummond Strikes Back," the further adventures of the gentlemanly amateur detective who gets himself into all sorts of difficulties.

This time it's the mysterious happenings in the London home of an Oriental prince that keeps him busy, with Loretta Young the pretty heart interest. Plenty of comedy is added by the presence of Charlie Butterworth as Drummond's friend Algy, and others in the cast include Warner Oland, C. Aubrey Smith and Arthur Hohl.

Headlining the vaudeville bill is Harry Kahne, mental wizard who leaves you completely mystified with his ability to write backwards and forwards and upside down, all the while keeping up a rapid and humorous monologue.

Other acts include Gene Marvey, "Broadway's Romantic Tenor," Sharon De Vries in a miniature musical comedy revue with a clever cast, and Selda Brothers in some amazing "Aerial Frolics."

Added attractions are Way Dalton and Jane Craig in "Twin Bedlam," which is all that the name implies, and Harry Savoy in a very funny song and comedy skit.

Modern's Fare

Today at the Modern there is a double feature program headed by "Dr. Monica," Warner Brothers' strong story of a woman's conflict between love and duty, with Kay Francis and Warren William heading the cast.

Wharf Cast in New Play

"A Lady Detained," a new play by Samuel Shipman and John B. Hymer, will be given its premiere at the Wharf theater at Provincetown on Monday evening. Shipman and Hymer have co-authored many successes, notably "East is West," and "Crime."

Bruce MacFarlane, who is on leave of absence from the chief role in the New York production of "Sailor Beware," will have the principal role, with Margot Stevenson playing the heroine. Others in the cast include Ethel Barrymore Colt, Don Rowan, Ethel Valentine, Calvin Thomas, Bess Wright, Sydney Mason, Charles Olcott, Coburn Goodwin, Mervin Williams, Douglas Gregory and Edwin E. Vickery.

Great Lester

The Great Lester, master illusionist, will feature the vaudeville bill opening at the Bowdoin Square theater tomorrow. Other clever acts make up the balance of the program, which has on the screen "The Thin Man," Dashiell Hammett's highly entertaining detective yarn, with Myrna Loy and William Powell in the leading roles.

NORTH SHORE SOCIETY FOLK, for the benefit of the Boston Music School Settlement, will hold open house from 2 until 6 o'clock, every Wednesday and Thursday during August at The Lindens in Danvers, the famous colonial mansion which has been for over 175 years a private residence and whose historic association with the troubled days prior to the Revolution adds romantic interest to its architectural beauty . . .

MRS. RICHARD M. RUSSELL

Built in 1752, when Danvers was known as Salem Village, for "King" Hooper of Marblehead, The Lindens is considered one of the finest examples of truly colonial architecture . . . The fine proportions of its stately rooms, the beauty of the carving and original wall paper, the spaciousness of the grounds and its lovely old-fashioned garden, all on a scale of elegance to match the fortunes that were made in commerce with the world, are eloquent of the background of gracious living created by merchant princes in the New World . . .

As the summer residence of the Hooper family, who were Loyalists, it was offered to General Gage as residential headquarters when in 1774 he was appointed by the King, governor of the Province, and as a diplomatic gesture, the state capitol was removed from rebel Boston to supposedly Tory Salem . . . But his residence at The Lindens was short . . . In spite of the two companies of Leslie's 64th British regiment which were quartered in the field across the road, Salem rebels, too, were troublesome and frequently molested the entertainment of the belles and gallants of the colony by Governor Gage and his American wife . . .

Tea Will Be Served in Garden

IN THE SAME STATELY ROOMS and lovely garden that furnished a gracious background for the gayety that overlaid the drama of 1774, North Shore society will entertain visitors to The Lindens during August . . . Tea will be served and an opportunity to tour the grounds and the house, which is furnished completely in rare antiques, will be included in the admission of one dollar . . . the proceeds will provide for the work of the Boston Music School Settlement which provides opportunity for the study of music to Boston children who might otherwise be denied . . .

For the opening tea, on August 1, Mrs. Henry L. Mason of Beverly Farms and Mrs. Frederic R. Galacar of Ipswich will be the hostesses, with Mrs. Carroll Perry of Ipswich, Mrs. Frank W. Grinnell of Boston and Ipswich, Mrs. Richard M. Russell of Cambridge, and Mrs. George S. Brewer of Ipswich as pourers . . .

Assisting Miss Leslie Grinnell, in charge of the servers, will be a group of the younger set including Miss Charlotte Valentine, Miss Letitia Brown, Miss Elizabeth Mason, Miss Jane Elwell and Miss Grace C. Heard . . .

On Thursday afternoon Mrs. Alden P. White and Mrs. Thomas Sanders of Salem will be the hostesses . . . Mrs. Henry P. Benson, Mrs. Frank W. Stearns of Swampscott, Mrs. H. D. Hodgkinson and Mrs. George Upton of Marblehead will pour and the servers will be Mrs. Marshall G. Hall, Mrs. Robert C. Petty and Mrs. Derby Weston . . .

Miss Nancy White, daughter of the late Judge Alden P. White, will have charge of the flower arrangements during the teas . . .

Committee in Charge of Program

THE COMMITTEE IN CHARGE are Mrs. Alexander Steinert of Boston, Mrs. Samuel J. Newman of Beverly, Mrs. Frank Chouteau Brown of Marblehead, Mrs. Charles M. Cabot of Ipswich, Mrs. Frederic R. Galacar, Mrs. Frank W. Grinnell and Mrs. Alden P. White . . .

Miss Mary Elizabeth Sears and Richard Sears, Jr., accompanied by their cousin, John B. Drake of Warrenton, Virginia, have gone to England where they will spend six weeks touring the countryside and visiting London . . . The Sears are children of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Sears of Beacon street and Ipswich . . .

August 9th is the date of the European Market Day and Street Fair which will be held at Pepperell. Miss Gladys Johnson and Miss Eleanor Greenwood, formerly of Boston, are directing the affair, with Mrs. O. B. Olson as general chairman . . .

Mary Elizabeth Sears

Many antiques and fine bargains are lined up for the old-fashioned auction in the morning, and the Scottish Kiltie Band from Manchester, N. H., will play in the afternoon. There will be several performances during the day of a Punch and Judy show for the children and the grown-ups too . . . The street singers will feature vocalists an accordion player, guitar, and a hand organ. Venetian necklaces, imported glass, and foreign and domestics will be on sale, with baskets, handmade quilts and other articles. Many games of skill are planned, with a horse shoe pitching contest for the men. The animal tent will be filled with calves, pigs, turkeys, chickens, and kittens for one to try to win; and the restaurant, featuring three Jamaican chefs will serve delicious lunch, and a native turkey dinner at night . . .

Week-End Guests at Graves Home

MRS. WILLIAM P. GRAVES AND DAUGHTER, of Boston and Pepperell, have invited many house guests for the occasion, among them being Mrs. Edward D. Emerson of Bolton, Mr. and Mrs. William R. Sampson of Boston and Plymouth and their daughter, Mrs. Joseph Stout, are planning to bring several friends to Pepperell for the day. Among others who have planned to enjoy the European Market Day are Dr. and Mrs. Boyden Pillsbury of Lowell, Major-General and Mrs. Benjamin F. Poor of Fitchburg, Dr. and Mrs. John E. Eversole of Groton, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Fessenden of Townsend, Dr. and Mrs. Pierce H. Leavitt, Mr. and Mrs. Roger Keith and Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Porter of Brockton and Buzzards Bay, and Hon. Henry C. Wright and friends of Bath, Maine. Several groups are coming from Peterboro, Jaffrey and Dublin, and Cape Cod.

There will be amusements for young and old all day long, and pony rides, a stylish trap drawn by two horses and driven by Miss Katherine Fitch of Boston and Pepperell, and several democrat wagons will take people for an historical ride about town. In the evening there will be a style show presented and street dancing until midnight.

POPULAR 'ENAMELED' EFFECT IS GIVEN TO LIPS BY NEW PREPARATION

Given in Marriage

By Adele Garrison

Mr. Veritzen tries his best flattery on Mother Graham and clears the way for the interview with the bride and groom and Madge.

PHILIP VERITZEN would need all his histrionism, I told myself, if he succeeded in changing my mother-in-law's decision not to play cribbage with my father because it would be discourteous to him as a guest. Mother Graham's decisions are like those of the ancient Medes, and her ideas concerning the proper treatment of guests are equally set.

But Philip Veritzen was an actor, and a good one, before he became a producer. Also, he belongs in the category of fascinating men who can "charm the birds off the bushes" with their handshimmers. I never had seen him in better form. I decided as he bowed low before my stately mother-in-law.

"Dear lady," he said, "do you know you are depriving me of a great pleasure by this refusal? I am intensely interested in cribbage, and I play it a little, though, of course, I am not in your class or Mr. Spencer's. But ever since my last visit here, I have been promising myself the pleasure of again watching a game between you."

THE HEEL OF ACHILLES

"I tell you, frankly, I want to watch your game very closely, in the hope that when I play with you—and I shall beg that honor when my game improves—I shall be able to know something of your strength and weaknesses; though I doubt if you have any of the latter."

Mother Graham flushed with pleasure. He had found the heel of Achilles, and the battle was his. I knew it even before she spoke.

"You ought to be ashamed to flatter an old woman so unconsciously," she said. "You should save such pretty speeches for the younger women."

"They should be wasted," he assured her, with another bow. "But won't you believe that they are not merely pretty speeches—that I am really sincere in my desire to see a game between you two."

VERITZEN'S VICTORY

"W—e—ll" she said slowly, "it seems a most disconsolate thing to do, but if you really wish it, I have no objection to playing, one one condition. When we are finished, you are to give me a game. You are far too modest when you speak of waiting until your game improves. No doubt you can beat me right now!"

Lillian standing next to me, and listening as eagerly as I to the colloquy, nudged me delightedly.

"The darling old humbug," she murmured from the side of her mouth, in the fashion we both learned during our secret service work in the World War. "That would be a smirk on the face of a less perfect lady. She knows she can beat cards and trousers off dear Philip, but she's pretending humility. But oh, boy! How he baited that hook!"

DRAFTING LILLIAN

"And now she's swallowed it!" I murmured, jubilant at Mr. Veritzen's success, although I was beginning to be dubious that Mother Graham might be so interested in the prospective game with Mr. Veritzen that she would miss him when he slipped away from his interview with Noel, Mary and me.

"Will you stand ready to throw yourself into the breach if necessary?" I asked, still in the same undertone.

"To the death," she answered. "Name the deed."

"When Mr. Veritzen sees that she is engrossed in the game he will slip away," I told her. "Will you stand ready to tell her, if she notices his absence, that Noel asked to see him about something?"

"Sure thing," she assented. "But that won't explain your absence."

"Let us hope for the best," I said pessimistically, as my mother-in-law rose from her chair and, attended devotedly by my father and Mr. Veritzen, moved toward the cribbage table.

"Queen Victoria, knowing that a chair would always be in place behind her, so that she did not need to turn her head, had nothing on your mother-in-law," Lillian commented, as she watched the older woman's stately progress down the room. "She just knows everybody is going to dance attendance upon her, and accepts it as a matter of course. Let's move up a little and watch the first act of the drama."

"I think I'd better keep out of the picture," I told her. "I'll get hold of Noel and Mary and see that there are no hitches, so that there won't be any delay when Mr. Veritzen gets a chance to slip away. When you get the chance, tell him where they are. I'll hover around in the offing, being certain that Mother Graham doesn't get a glimpse of me."

"Aye, aye, Skipper," Lillian said, with a gamin-like grin. "I'll do as pretty a job of swabbing the decks as you would like to see."

Claret Lemonade

1 cup sugar syrup
⅔ cup lemon juice (lemons)
2½ cups water
Claret wine (1 to 2 cups)

Mix all the ingredients, adding the claret wine to taste. This is an excellent drink to serve in a punch bowl, garnished with slices of lemon, orange and any seasonable fresh fruit.

Tennis Party Frocks Have New Chic

You can wash this rough white chalk crepe, which has a low square back and a scarf and belt of navy and white polka dotted silk.

Here we have the darling of the late summer — washable white satin trimmed with adjustable bows at either shoulder. Note the action skirt.

By PRUNELLA WOOD

BACKLESS wash dresses cut on sporting lines are about as comfortable as any uniform yet invented for summer, and if they come with a free swinging short jacket of matching or contrasting fabric they are just that much more useful. For anyone can put up with a light coat during shopping tours in town or to meet a train near the city if there is very little on beneath the garment, and in a jiffy the disguise can be removed to reveal a really negligee costume.

Uncrushable linen is another material much favored in this class of frocks. It is perfectly adaptable for active sports, and yet has some degree of formality intrinsically. There is a swell shade of pale raspberry in this fabric, a tint never seen in anything else that's washable.

CORDED sheers, waffle sheers and sheers that show a brocaded shiny stripe or dot motif in self color are many and varied. They weigh practically nothing, yet have enough body to tailor and hang well, so they are no end popular for the sports afternoon costume.

By MARTHA LEE

HOW would you like to lock up the kitchen for the summer?

Of course, no one can quite do that, but you can go a long way toward it by serving salad meals these hot days. And, without omitting vitamins or calories or anything else from the menu which the family should have.

Right now, with fresh fruits and vegetables flooding the market, and with prices of all salad ingredients, including mayonnaise, down to low levels, salad meals are inexpensive, too. Just try them, menus and listen to the family cheers.

CAST INTO EDEN

Jerome Carries Axe for Defense

By Henry C. Rowland

CHAPTER XXII

Jerome was a good boat-builder and knew precisely how to go about his job. His material was of the easiest sort to work and his tools good. The chicken house was stripped of alternating planks which left it standing, but freely ventilated. Linda proved an able helper, but the work went slowly.

The bench with its wood vise was in the storeroom cellar and the dory being built in the house, fifty yards away. The planks had to be carried back and forth for planing and fitting.

Besides, Jerome was the sort of craftsman for whom it is temperamentally impossible to do a slovenly job. He was no amateur, having grown up longshore and built small craft from boyhood. He was an artist as well as an artisan, and his joiner-work was precise.

Linda helped him in a state of admiration that had a more rapid growth than that of the perfectly well modeled and constructed dory. She had never thought of him as a skilled hand-worker.

She had expected some sort of clumsy, leaky homemade craft that might hopefully serve to ferry them over to the mainland with a good deal of bailing. She had never counted on anything as trim and tight and shapely as now grew under her eyes.

"I'd never have believed you had it in you, Jerry," she said the second day, after he had cut out and fitted the stem piece and stern transom, and sprung the strips of planking that served as garboard strakes on the mold and nailed them in.

"Most of us have got something in us that it's good for us to get out."

"That's true enough," she agreed, and looked thoughtful.

GORILLAS BEHAVE

The gorillas had not annoyed them. They made their usual calls, but did not linger after the accustomed sweets were given them. The Racketeer remained persona non grata. When he appeared on the edge of the jungle Jerome dropped work long enough to hurl something at him, with a few harsh orders to be off. All of the family seemed aware that some serious business was afoot that left no time for social amenities.

A week of steady painstaking work saw the dory finished. Even Jerome admitted that the job was good. It was then necessary to fashion oars, which he achieved by fitting blades into straight shoved poles. Thole-pins had been let into the dory's gunwhales. Jerome also cut a bamboo mast and a yard on which to bend the big fine grass floor mats as a sail. He gave the dory a coat of paint.

"All we've got to do now is to drag her down to the beach and shove her in," he said. "Then you can keep her off a little while I make a few trips to load stores."

"And get some clothes, if any, out of the chests."

"Yes. I can capsize one or two and saw out the bottom. That won't mutilate the carving and can be easily repaired."

"Why not do that now, to save time?"

"All right. Then we'll be all set."

"Suppose you put one just one bottle of champagne in the spring to cool, Linda. I want to go up on the plateau for a final look-see before breaking into the chests."

"All right. I couldn't bear it if the Dueno were to blow in just after we'd helped ourselves to the only thing we didn't have to have."

AXE FOR DEFENSE

Jerome picked up an axe that he carried when going any distance from the house premises on the off chance of trouble with the Racketeer. Such a weapon would have availed him nothing in a clash with Old Man Gorilla, who would have weighed close to five hundred pounds. It would have been like schoolboy attempts to defend himself with a toy hatchet from the attack of an infuriated Zulu warrior. But the Racketeer was a gangling youth of perhaps two hundred pounds weight, and Jerome an athlete who lopped the beam at about twenty pounds less, so that the woodsman's axe might have put the odds in his favor. Also the Racketeer had shown himself to be mischievous but not murderous.

Jerome went up the ledges and made the round of the plateau far enough to get a view of the sea on all sides. No vessel could have escaped observation unless she were close in to the shore, sheltered from view by the fringe of palms.

Returning, he came out on the clearing through a grove of orange trees in full blossom yet, still bearing some of the ripe fruit. The air was drenched with the sweet perfume. He heard Linda singing from some invisible source not far away. She had a clear, pitched throaty voice like unto a cello's. She was crooning: "And the moon comes over the mountain."

Then she came in sight from behind a comquait bush and Jerome received a fresh shock of the eyes so far delivered on this enchanted isle. Linda had dressed herself for the party, just as Eve might have. She looked like a very beautiful blonde Polynesian girl bedecked for some gala occasion. Her costuming was entirely floral, though the leather surplice showed under the short skirt that she had quickly woven from tendrils of the bougainvillea with bright notes from more brilliant flowers worked in.

She pirouetted in front of Jerome. "How do you like my party dress, Jerry? You're hot and scratched. Better duck into the pool."

He did so and emerged refreshed.

"You have a bridal look that's not quite in order for a christening," he said.

"Well, a boat christening is sort of a wedding ceremony, Jerry. A marriage with the sea."

"That comes later . . . and plenty of hard work between. Every time I turn my back you slip deeper into the Eve motif. It's high time we got out of here before I flop into the demoralized Adam role." . . .

They went inside. There was a big earthen bowl on the center table and some cups beside it. Linda said: "Drink some of this, Jerry."

He drank thirstily. The day had been more than usually hot and even now with the shadows lengthening the air was heavy. The dory looked at his handicraft moodily.

"This isn't christening the boat, Linda."

"No, let's do that. I'll splash some on her bow . . . She filled a cup and dashed the contents against the stout stem of the dory. "I christen thee . . . Lillith . . ."

"LILLITH PRETTIER"

There was a moment of silence. Then Jerome said dryly: "Eve would have been quicker to paint."

"Lillith is prettier. How do you like the drink?"

"It's delicious . . . but queer. There's something I don't seem to recognize . . . and that's what gives it such a . . . well, not a kick exactly, but a sort of exotic flavor. What is it?"

"So that's it," Jerome said. "We must be careful. There's too much responsibility." He refilled his glass.

Linda waited until he had emptied it. Then she said:

"Jerry, there isn't one drop of spirits of any sort in that drink. Not even the champagne. I don't think we'll need it after all. This is better."

He set down his cup. "What's that you were telling me about the forbidden fruit? Linda, is this . . . it?"

"Don't be cross, Jerry. It's quite all right."

"How all right?"

"The fruit dropped . . ."

"The Forbidden Fruit . . . I caught it like a football."

"You caught it?"

"I saw what was happening and got underneath. When it fell I caught it in my hands. It was soft but firm. I hurried back to the house. I couldn't wait to taste the fruit. I could feel the juice swishing round inside so I cut it open over this bowl. There was about a quart. It had the most heavenly flavor."

"Then why mix it with anything?"

"I didn't. I knew you'd be cross and wouldn't taste it if I told you."

"I wonder if that's how Eve put it over on Adam," Jerome said curtly.

Declarer Exploits Foe's Fear By Psychological Bluff

By Josephine Culbertson

QUITE frequently by making use of the advantage he has in having his hand concealed, the Declarer can steal tricks from the opponent where they do not legitimately exist. A psychologically alert Declarer can very frequently play his cards in such a manner that he will convey an entirely wrong impression of his holdings to the opponents and thereby make them fall into his trap.

What the Declarer actually does is to exploit the enemy's fear, and a very fine example of this is seen in the hand below.

West, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

	♠AK97 ♡AQ5 ◇AK ♣AJ64
♠J1032 ♡J43 ◇10932 ♣87	North West East South	♠864 ♡K1092 ◇J4 ♣KQ109
	♠Q5 ♡876 ◇Q8765 ♣532

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	2♠	Pass	3◇
Pass	4◇	Pass	5◇
Pass	3NT	Pass	Pass
Pass

West discovered the best Opening lead—the club eight. North, the Dummy, ducked the trick completely and East won with the club nine, taking the club King. This trick was won by Dummy's Ace and now the Ace and King of diamonds were cashed. South, who was a player of great ability and keen judgment, now played the heart Queen from Dummy.

East's reaction to this play was exactly what South had hoped it would be. East feared that South held the heart Jack and a set up diamond suit and he therefore decided to allow the Queen to win the trick and thus keep the theoretical heart. Jack from being an entry to South's hand. South, of course, promptly made use of the spade Queen, which he had hitherto concealed as an entry to his hand. He crashed the Queen of diamonds and this card provided his ninth trick.

Such a "make believe" play as this would fail if East happened to belong to that small group of Bridge players who are dominated by the fear of losing an Ace or any high card. In this particular instance East really had no way of telling whether or not South could get to his own hand. He can't be severely criticized for the holding, as the type of play which South made is a most unusual one.

The heart trick which the Declarer so cleverly stole was his ninth trick and enabled South to fulfill an otherwise very difficult contract. It is possible that South might have made his contract by more normal means—that is, eventually end-playing East or West, but this would have been most difficult.

Creamy Indelible Lipstick in Gay Jeweled Case Is Joy to Own

(Posed by Loretta Young).

By Juliet Shelby

YOU MAY THINK you are the kind of a girl who knows her own mind, but you'll teeter weakly on the fence, and with an eye to your budget, run like a March hare to a Tremont street shop where you'll find an indelible lipstick that really defies hot weather and water.

It will stay with you under sea or sand and sun, and because it has a cream base, isn't drying to the lips. It comes in an exquisitely enameled jewel case—as ultrasmart a container as you'll see this season or any other.

Since nothing is more annoying than peeling lips, or lips that feel six times the size they really are, you'll go for this lipstick in a big way. It won't chap or roughen your lips and it will stay by you till bedtime.

If your lips have been spoiled by excessive use of lipstick you'll be pleased to know of a bland, soothing preparation that serves as a protective base for lip rouge, to relieve irritated lips, or for removing lip rouge. You can get it for a very small sum and it's handy as anything to take off indelible lipstick. I like to use it over my lipstick as well as under when I go sea bathing. It will give the lips an "enameled" look that is truly glamorous.

To learn the name of the indelible lipstick and the very inexpensive base, telephone Juliet Shelby, Liberty 4900. If you prefer writing for the information send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Miss Shelby, Boston Evening American, Boston.

Wave Solution

Question: I have heard that solutions for setting waves in the hair are harmful. Would you advise using an electric dryer?

H. G., Wakefield.

Answer: A good wave solution should not injure the hair providing it is not used more frequently than once a week. You must keep your scalp in a healthy condition. The electric dryers are more injurious to your scalp than the solutions for setting a wave. So, if it is possible, sit out in the sun while you are setting your wave.

Secretly Wed Two Months

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

What is the proper way to announce a secret marriage of two months? We will be in our new home when we announce it. Is it correct to send out announcements or cards announcing our new address?

Since you are going to be in your new home when you announce your marriage, I think that an excellent way for you to announce your marriage is to have a house-warming and send for your invitations, a Mr. and Mrs. card with your new address engraved on it. Have your sent the double visiting cards, the folded ones, with the name and address on the first page, and space within for a written message." Your stationer will show you these, and they would be perfect to use for this invitation.

Of course, if you wish, you may send out the conventional form of announcement, but I'm not one hundred per cent in favor of this tardy announcement of a marriage that was not conventionally planned.

SUCCESS NO. 876657

(From the Lamar, Mo., Democrat)

We were asking Sheriff Bassett about A. P. (Suitcase) Almon, who after the talk with the representative of the Joplin Machinery Company, in Judge Fink's office, it was evident would be let out on a small fine. Suitcase paid the company for the flues he had stolen. The sheriff says Suitcase got his nickname from a habit he had for a long time of always carrying a grip or suitcase in which to carry anything he happened to pick up. He has plainly done well, as, instead of a suitcase, he now uses a "poke."

Q. and A. DEPARTMENT

Dear, Thoughtful Aunt Bella:

It is something that's been on my mind for quite a while now, and although this is the first time in my life I've ever written to a Q. and A. Department, I think it's about time somebody would speak up on the subject. I mean the way young people rush into marriage without knowledge or forethought. A lot of them aren't prepared for marriage, now are they? Indignant.

Ans.—You said it, baby. Some of them haven't even gotten a divorce.

A. ("Old-Fashioned") Bella.

"In the last analysis men fight for their women, and there will be wars as long as there are women worth fighting for."—Maj.-Gen. Johnson Hagood.

BIOLOGICAL NOTE

When I was a youth at an innocent age
I wondered, as youngsters will do,
At most of the puzzles on life's cryptic page,
And the questions I asked were not few.
When data on infants I eagerly sought
Through putting my sire on the grill,
He laughed when he told me that babies were brought
By a bird with a very big bill.
A long time has passed, all too quickly, I find,
And the stork and his legend have flown,
And I'm answering queries of similar kind
For a questioning lad of my own.
So I grin while I think of the headache I caught
When the Doc put his paw in my till,
As I tell my own youngster that babies are brought
By a bird with a very big bill.

A Kind Word for the Left Hand in Sport

Madden's unofficial successes against "Unknown" Winston, a ... flailing type of fighter, was due to his stiff left, which he ...pped inside Winston's circular hooks all evening.

... whipped Dempsey twice that way, and Sharkey, who ... straight left in his prime, used to stab Jim Maloney, ... fanner," to ribbons.

S... ...ely, in almost every branch of sport, the left hand is the "smart" or guiding hand, and the right is the "power hand."

It is so in golf and baseball batting; fielding too, for that matter. Also in billards. Wrestlers tell me that the left arm is vastly more useful in clamping on holds than the other.

Frank Shields carried American tennis hopes for the coveted Davis Cup in the final with the Britons but U. S. hopes received a costly setback when Buny Austin beat the tall American in the opening match of their series today. The scores were 6—4, 6—4, 6—1, Shields contributing to his own defeat by wildness. (Picture from International News Photograph Service.)

Sturgis Rice predicts that the Franklin Country Club three-day open tournament, which starts next Thursday, will be the best in years. For a number of seasons, Franklin attracted the best talent and the largest fields in its annual open tournaments. Franklin is staging a comeback, and Rice is the one surviving member of the old guard who can put it across.

And from what I know of the Portland Country Club course, and Cunningham's and Little's ability, I'll bet that a 14 will be good for at least a half at the sixth hole.

Pat Hegarty, the new junior [illegible] of the state, is addicted to ice cream cones. After every match at Woodland, he hustled down to the Lower Falls for a couple of double cones. Probably that is the reason he was so cool [illegible] during the championship.

SHARES HIGHER AS PRESSURE IS LIFTED

New York, July 28.—With pressure on the utilities absent and the general liquidation over, the stock market was able to add to yesterday's gains today.

Speculative sentiment was still unnerved, however, by the collapse on Thursday and this was reflected in the decline in trading activity and the failure of aggressive buying to develop.

Other markets were better with stocks. Grains scored gains running to more than a cent a bushel while cotton was steady. Bonds were higher and the dollar steady.

The feature in stocks was a flurry in the aviation group on the announcement of the government's plans to build up the nation's air force. The volatile Wright Aeronautical spurted 9 points. United Aircraft and Douglas Rose a point each.

Some of the industrial shares like DuPont rose a point and more each. Fractional gains in Consolidated Gas and American Telephone, yesterday's weak spots, helped firm the utility list.

Rails were better but N. Y. Central was sluggish. Baltimore & Ohio was up around a point, as was Atchison. Steels did little, with U. S. Steel ruling fractionally higher around 35.

Mining stocks were neglected and U. S. Smelting was easier. Oils were little better than steady. Persistent buying was again noted in General Motors but the auto list failed to develop any pronounced strength.

Stocks showed a generally firm tone in first hour dealings with sailing tendencies from Thursday's collapse continuing in most issues.

Gains were small, however, and the market continued to display a nervous undertone despite the better tone of the news from Europe. Trading was at a slower pace than in recent sessions and the list turned quiet after a flurry at the opening.

Gains were scored by utilities, motors, steels and industrials while rails were irregular.

While partial relief from heat and drought in the west made business observers more hopeful, week-end reports furnished no indication of a break in the seasonal lull.

Automobile output, after holding steady for several weeks, declined substantially this week. Cram estimated output at 59,412 units, 6117 below that of the previous week and 5013 less than in the same week last year.

As a result of the decline, July automobile production estimates were revised downward to 260,000 units for the United States and Canada. Further seasonal recession in demand for cars was forecast for August.

The Federal Reserve Bank of New York reported that department store sales in the New York Metropolitan area in the first half of July were 4 per cent higher than a year ago.

Preparations for formulation of margin regulations by the Federal Reserve Board in accordance with the Federal Security Exchange Control measure were seen in the announcement that the stock exchange was collecting data on margins. The exchange is seeking from its members an analysis of the margin holdings of customers and by brokerage firms and their partners.

Not much change in steel operations next week was expected on the basis of tentative schedules for the period in some centers.

York Ice Gets Figures On Air Conditioning

The York Ice Machinery Corporation is one of the very few manufacturers of railroad air conditioning who are able to definitely determine the installation and operation costs of their equipment.

An opportunity of obtaining accurate figures has been given York by equipping over 300 passenger cars on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad with mechanically operated air conditioning.

These cars have traveled more than 33,000,000 car miles and a careful study of performance records during three seasons of operation has brought forth some interesting facts. The temperatures maintained in the Baltimore and Ohio trains during the summer varies from approximately 76 to 79 degrees F., with a relative humidity varying from approximately 43 to 50 per cent.

A check of the 1933 season showed that loss of refrigerant from all causes, such as valve stem leakage, system purging, etc., has averaged not more than 1½ pounds per car per month. This is an operating cost item of approximately $1 per car per month.

Records during 1933, which included labor and principally for inspection and minor adjustments to equipment, required approximately half-time of five men for 140 cars, which is equivalent to a maintenance cost of only $3.60 per car per month.

Today, as a result of continuous development, increased efficiency of operation and important reductions in weight and compactness of design has brought the average cost of York Air Conditioning equipment down to $5500 per car (installed).

GANGSTERS LIFT POLICE RADIO CODE BOOKS

Reports that the Boston police radio code books have fallen into the hands of gangsters reached headquarters today.

According to the report, a member of a South Boston gang has had the books for the various divisions in his possession since they were printed.

Messages sent to cruising cars are sent in code form, to outsmart the gangsters who have short wave radio sets installed in their autos and hideouts.

Possession of the police code by criminals would aid rather than prevent successful getaways.

The new radio system, installed Thursday night was in good working order today although the Brighton division were having difficulty in picking up the messages.

Thirteen messages were sent out from midnight, most of them of minor importance and although cars were quick in reaching the scene of the crime, no arrests resulted.

Despite reports from police headquarters that the system was working satisfactorily, police in the cruising cars particularly in the area between Massachusetts avenue and North station, were complaining about the "many dead spots."

One of the 64 cars in continuous operation since the inauguration of the radio at 10 o'clock Thursday night, has been withdrawn from service because of a short circuit which disabled the machine.

Since the system has been in operation, 85 messages and orders have been broadcast, resulting in one arrest solely from efficiency of the radio calls.

That took place, last night, when police arrested Charles Allen, 43, of 34 Warrington street, South End, after he is alleged to have tried to pass a worthless check in the furniture store of Isaac Spector, Washington street, South End. His arrest resulted when the manager called police and informed them that he was suspicious of the check. Two minutes later a radio police car arrived at the store.

The radio set used by Murton and Norma Millen in their Audubon road apartment is back into use again. But this time at police headquarters.

Members of the Boston Police Detective Bureau are using the set to receive police radio calls.

2 Constables Killed in Revolver Fight

Chicago, July 28—Two constables were killed early today in a three-sided revolver battle in front of a South Chicago Heights tavern in what resident said was the result of an argument over a carnival fan argument over a carnival fan dance. The victims were Otto Emery, 43, Chicago Heights, and William Piner 50, South Chicago Heights. Residents said Piner had arrested Emery and taken him into court where he was fined for permitting a fan dance in connection with a carnival.

TODAY

a game in which men knock little white balls around the grass in these days of submarines, airplanes and international depression is easily guessed.

The British government is learning more and more about airplanes and their importance in the next war. A recent experimental "air attack on London" shows that enemy bombing planes would do "heavy damage," making direct hits on important buildings.

In the latest experiment among other buildings destroyed, theoretically, was the air ministry building.

Of twenty-one bombers sent to attack the chemical industries building, seven "got clean through to the objective and back again without molestation."

At present it seems impossible to prevent airplane destruction of cities, especially with poison gas bombs, described by a member of the House of Lords, that "would kill every human being within one mile in all directions of the spot where the bomb might fall."

With our silly little American air equipment, it would be ridiculous even to attempt any self defense. We should have to ask an invading air fleet, "Please, how much will you charge to go home." A force of airplanes and submarines of the right kind and size would enable this country to say, "You may attack and you may damage us, but if you do, your navy and your nation will soon cease to exist. Come over here and we shall show you enough to prove it to you."

'You Were Meant for Me'

ANITA PAGE OF FILMS WEDS

By Universal Service

Hollywood, July 28—For some time Hollywood folk have been saying to themselves and to each other:

"Anita Page looks awfully happy, doesn't she? She must be in love. Wonder who he is?"

They learned the "he" is Nacio Herb Brown, composer of scores of popular songs, to whom the actress was married quietly at Tia Juana Thursday.

Brown said:

"You see, the romance really began quite a long time ago. In fact, when I wrote 'You Were Meant For Me' for 'Broadway Melody', I dedicated it to Anita."

The marriage ceremony was performed in the Tia Juana city hall by a justice of the peace.

Adjt. Gen. Ralph Immell ordered the troops here from the mobilization camp at Sparta, after a night of rioting in this model industrial village. Thirty-five carloads of armed men immediately entrained at Camp McCoy.

The dead in the riot:

Lee Wakefield, 25, a picket of Sheboygan; H. Engleman, Sheboygan.

Minnesota Governor Forbids Picketing

Minneapolis, July 28—Demobilization of 500 National guardsmen awaiting a call to aid in enforcing military rule of the city, gripped by a truck drivers' strike, proceeded today as disputing factions resorted to watchful waiting. Both sides were deadlocked and there was no prospect of settlement.

Protests of military rule, however, were voiced by both strike leaders and the employers' advisory committee.

Governor Olson warned the strikers no picketing would be permitted and said truck movements would be regulated entirely by the military.

Sea Scout Ship Sails on Cruise

With a crew of 20 aboard, the sea scout ship Porpoise left here shortly before dawn today on the annual "long cruise."

Sunday Advertiser Brings Treasure Certificates

In tomorrow's issues of the Boston Sunday Advertiser will appear the certificates necessary to take part in the big Treasure Hunt on Sunday afternoon at Paragon Park, sponsored by the Boston Evening American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

A great outpouring is expected because thousands turned out for the first of the summer's Treasure Hunts—and the second, on tomorrow, was arranged by request.

Other certificates, treasure certificates, will be hidden on various amusements throughout Paragon Park, and there will be many prizes, some for cash and some for the park amusements.

The certificates will be hidden on the Lindy Loop, the Caterpillar and other concessions. They will not be hidden in any dangerous or inaccessible place. All you will need is an entry certificate from the Boston Sunday Advertiser and a pair of sharp eyes to bring you a Treasure Hunt prize.

Order your Boston Sunday Advertiser early, clip out the necessary certificate printed in the Sunday issues, take it with you to Paragon Park Sunday afternoon—and join the fun.

RITES HELD FOR WINSOR M'CAY

By Universal Service

New York, July 28—Funeral services were held at 1 p. m. today for Winsor McCay, noted artist and cartoonist, who died suddenly Thursday. The rites were held in the McCay home at Sheepshead Bay.

Hundreds of telephone calls, telegrams and cables from all parts of the world were received at the home. They came not only from public officials, editors, writers and fellow artists who were his friends, but from persons here and abroad who knew Mr. McCay only through his work.

The services were under the auspices of Lodge 22 of the Brooklyn Elks, which Mr. McCay joined in 1907, soon after he made his home in Sheepshead Bay. The Rev. Robert L. Smith, chaplain of the lodge, will preside.

MAYOR HOST TO NEWSBOYS

"It is wrong to restrict newsboys under the age of 16 from selling newspapers," declared "Mayor" Samuel Kramer, head of the Burroughs Newsboys' Foundation self-government organization in a speech before Mayor Mansfield at City Hall today. Mayor Kramer was accompanied by the Cabinet, Council and a delegation of fifty citizens of Newsboyville, in celebrating Newsboys Day at the City Hall.

"I myself wouldn't want to see young boys selling papers on the streets at night; but in the daytime, yes," the youthful cityhead said. "But from the time a fellow is 12, the thing for him to do is sell papers. Selling papers keeps boys out of mischief and trouble."

After Mayor Mansfield showed the newsboys' government how the city offices were run, fifty newsboy took off in buses for a two-week stay in a New Hampshire camp. The Mayor praised the newsboys for their efforts in thrift.

Here is a cordial invitation for you to see the Free Rental Bureau whenever you desire complete information about any kind of rentals, furnished or unfurnished, hotels or business locations. Barbara Holmes will be pleased to help you.

MORE SHOWERS DUE TODAY

For the third day Boston faced a program of thundershowers, but there was still no trace on today's weather map of the steady rain that would be welcomed as an end to the long drouth.

Bolts of lightning in yesterday's storm caused heavy damage as they struck more than a dozen places in Winchester, Arlington, Cambridge, Marlboro and the South End of Boston.

The worst of these was in Winchester where the house of Edward S. Mansfield in Cabot street was fired by lightning. Damage amounted to $8000 and it took the combined Winchester, Arlington and Woburn fire departments to halt the blaze.

THREE HOMES STRUCK

There were three other Winchester homes struck. They belonged to Patrick W. Doherty of Canal street; James H. Hussey of Yale street and Mrs. Sarah M. White of Foxcroft road.

The Russell school in Medford street, Arlington, was also hit by a bolt, as was a house in old Mystic street and a cupola at the Symmes Arlington Hospital.

A number of narrow escapes from lightning were reported in various sections of Greater Boston and for a few minutes the switchboard at the City Hospital here was out of commission.

PERILED HOSPITAL

Michael O'Malley, an ambulance driver, reported that he was within three feet of the spot where the bolt struck, in the hospital courtyard in East Concord street. The telephone operators, the Misses Katherine Lyons, Elizabeth Fitzgibbons and Mary Tuohy, all received shocks.

Washouts were reported from several places, notably in Arlington Heights. Several newly tarred streets in Quincy were undermined by the rainfall and Mayor Ross announced that enough water had been garnered in city reservoirs so that the hose-sprinkling ban could be lifted.

OFFICERS' DASH SAVES BRIDAL

Because Secretary of State Robinson C. Tobey of Maine stepped into the gap, wedding bells were ready to ring today for Miss Regina G. Vachon of Brookline and Harry King Cross of Newton Centre.

The couple were to be wed by Rev. Alexander Vachon, the girl's uncle, at Kennebunkport. He is attached to Laval University at Quebec.

Just as everyone thought that it was all over but the congratulations, Rev. Vachon discovered that the wedding license was improperly attested and the ceremony couldn't be held at all.

Secretary Tobey came to the rescue by ordering one of his inspectors to rush to Kennebnkport with a new license and have it properly O. K.'d by town officials.

Europe Fears Peace Most

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

What Europe fears most of all now is peace.

It dreads that this Austrian thing will amount to nothing.

So the gentle diplomats will pour oil on the raging fire.

The most important man in Europe today is a fellow named Getcha. You never heard of General Getcha? He is the bird who yells, "Getcha men together."

When the men are together there will be twenty million of them and, Lafayette, there we are not.

NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

SATURDAY, JULY 28, 1934

LARGEST EVENING CIRCULATION BY MORE THAN 80,000

America, Keep Out!

THE world holds its breath and awaits the sequel of the events in Vienna.

WILL IT BE WAR?

Not merely a civil war in faction-torn Austria, nor even a struggle by the latter to maintain its independence against the pressure from Nazi Germany——

But a general war—bursting over harried Europe?

The war long feared and by many believed to be inevitable as the result of the inflammable and surcharged international situation which has long threatened the world's peace?

The killing of the Austrian Chancellor is of far greater significance in itself than the assassination twenty years ago of the Austrian Archduke at Sarajevo.

The psychology which today prevails in Europe, the fears and ambitions which sway its peoples, are more complex and more dangerous.

And yet, the lesson of war's havoc is so fresh in the minds of men, the heavy burden of the last war is still so grinding and insupportable, that hope springs from these facts, if from no others, that the situation may be solved.

From England, notwithstanding its exposure to every crisis that descends upon the nearby continent, there rises the demand that its government abstain from any course which could involve the nation in a European struggle.

"It is not our war," comes the word from England, "if war is to be."

NO MORE—AND EVEN LESS—IS IT AMERICA'S WAR—

No matter whom it involves, nor what its issues, nor what its consequences may be, whether predicted only or actually realized.

That lesson—please God—we have learned for all time.

AND WE WILL NOT FORGET IT!

The Milk Investigation

There would be little ground for complaint against the scores and scores of Federal boards and commissions carrying on investigations of almost everything under the sun, if all of these probes were organized on as sensible a basis as the present New England milk investigation.

There is a milk problem, especially in the northeastern part of the country. Farmers are paid too little for their product, and consumers pay too much. And there are other evils, not the least of which is racketeering.

But with milk being sent from New England into New York and Pennsylvania and vice versa, almost a dozen different state control boards have jurisdiction over the problem. And each board has different standards.

The government suggests that what is needed is a strong regional board to cover the entire area. But it will make no move to set up such a board. That is up to the states. The government is gathering all the facts in all the states. That is its job.

If the states can agree to unite on the matter for their common benefit, the government will be glad to help them with the knowledge it is gaining from the present investigation.

That is its job, too. But Washington insists, and properly so, that the first move must be made by the states concerned.

Leather Men Aided

The tanners and leather merchants of industrial New England have at last been promised aid by the Federal government. This is to solve a problem brought on by Washington measures to aid the agricultural West.

The tremendous surplus of hides resulting from the drouth relief program, which called for the purchase and slaughter of cattle, will be held off the market with the help of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

A ten million dollar holding company, financed 85 per cent with government funds, with tanners putting up the remaining 15 per cent, will remove the threat of dumping which in past weeks threw gloom over the leather markets.

It is nice to have some of the problems of the industrial East realized, but it is hard to escape the conclusion that it has been a mighty short sighted policy that brings hardship to one section while attempting to relieve in another.

War on Mosquitoes

It cost $1,000,000, but it was worth it!

Today—five years after the Legislature made the appropriation—every salt water marsh from Cape Ann to Rhode Island has been drained in the war on mosquitoes.

Cape Codders are especially grateful. They have almost forgotten what the pesky insects look like. It has done their tourist business no end of good. They are taxing themselves to keep the pests from returning.

Meanwhile, the State is going farther inland with its mosquito war. Massachusetts has now proved, as Chicago's North Shore and other areas did years ago, that there is no reason why mosquitoes and other insects should spoil anyone's summer.

They can be exterminated. And they should be. Health demands it, even more than comfort.

Yankee Shrewdness

Most states would not care to advertise their abandoned farms. They would consider it poor publicity indeed. But with true Yankee shrewdness Vermont thinks otherwise.

That state has been advertising such farms as ideal sites for summer homes. There were only about 200 such places abandoned between 1910 and 1929, but since then the number has grown to almost 1000.

Then Vermont decided to advertise. In a weakness it found strength. The farm houses are being snapped up eagerly at bargain prices. And their new owners are bringing fresh wealth to Vermont.

Industries Protest

Reported proposal of ERA officials to buy a $100,000 furniture factory in Knoxville, Tenn., draws a protest from President Richard Greenwood of the Wood-Wakefield Company and other representatives of the Bay State furniture industry.

Maine is also fighting a Federal plan to lend $5,500,000 to a pulp mill in Florida.

Governor Louis J. Brann of Maine rightly condemns competitive participation of the government in private business. This is the ground on which both Maine and Massachusetts industries base their protests.

Pace Too Fast

By Winifred Black

Winifred Black

So she's going to live after all, the little baby girl they found buried alive on the outskirts of Baltimore.

And the police are looking for two women and three men who brought the baby there and buried her—alive.

I wonder if it's a good thing for that baby to live, poor child.

Born with the blood of two human wolves in her veins, what can the poor little creature ever find of real happiness and contentment in this world.

What sort of people are we breeding in this country, anyhow? Where do they come from; from what savage source do they spring?

You can't pick up the paper these days without hearing about new-born babies buried alive, little children of five or six tortured to death—a child of seven locked up in a room like a wild beast, two children left at home in an empty house all night with their lips taped so they could make no sound, and fed, poor little things, to the bedpost.

No, it wasn't kidnapers who did these things to those two little children, it was their own real, darling, loving father and mother.

The father wanted to go to a crap game and mamma wanted to go to a party, and they thought it was fun to frighten the children into silence.

What will the authorities do with that father and mother, do you think?

Do you believe that such inhuman brutes should be allowed to live among decent people—would you want to live next to them yourself?

And how about these people who buried that helpless little baby alive?

What ought to be done with them?

More than likely some sensitive soul will go and interview the two women and write a sob story about it.

They were too poor to take care of the baby, they didn't know what else to do with it, nonsense! they knew had disgraced herself and they wanted to help her out.

And the three men who came along—who and what can they be?

Will they ever get a decent night's sleep again—how can they ever live with the sound of that poor little baby's cries in their ears?

What are we going to do with monsters like these?

And how are we ever going to find out and produce them?

Are we all so busy paying bills and planning how we're going to get the next instalment on the new car paid and thinking out how we can dress better than our neighbors, that we have neither time nor energy left to set up some standards of right living for right's sake, no matter whether it's comfortable or convenient, or not?

WAY OUT—OF LOVE

The air has been filled with the fragments of broken engagements this past season—and most of them were smashed with as much noise as a small boy uses in smashing his Christmas toys.

Men pride themselves on their "technique" in the love-game; but as Andy would say, "technique is the nicest thing they HAVE, if they don't get".

A man has so many changes of heart, that you'd fancy the first thing he'd want to learn is how to make a graceful exit from a flirtation, a foolish entanglement or a fading love affair. But the art of getting rid of a woman gently, dexterously and graciously, is seldom among the modern man's accomplishments.

Falling in love is about the easiest thing he does—but erweing out of it is hardest and clumsiest.

A girl may be just as tired of a wilting summer romance as a man is; but she likes to put the finishing touches on love thoroughly and effectively. It offends her artistic sense to leave any loose ends.

A man, on the other hand, either rushes into and out of a love affair as though it were a subway station. Or else he leaves it hanging up in the air, like a body after a lynching party.

The average man hates to EXPLAIN things. He hates to "talk things over." When he knows that the affair or the engagement is sagging in the middle, he just goes off and leaves it to come apart of its own accord.

He stops seeing the girl or calling her up or writing her, and soothes his conscience (if any) with the hope that she'll "understand."

Running the knife in inches is what he calls a "gentleman's way" of breaking off with a woman. But a good, swift, clean cut would be far less painful—and far more creditable.

There is such a thing as painless surgery, even in love. It is not necessary to cut love off with a cleaver. It can be done much more effectively with a scalpel and the anaesthetic of a few tender parting words.

Some men can tell a girl that she is over—or ended—and regretfully that she feels almost complimented. Others are so brutal or so awkward about it, that she feels as though she had been blackjacked.

Some men can change partners in the love-game as gracefully as though it were a Paul Jones—but most men tread all over a woman's vanity in the mad rush to get to the next woman.

Getting rid of a loving woman has never been an easy job—but let no man boast of his technique as a lover, unless he can make a graceful and becoming exit from a romance. And THAT requires all the nerve of a Dillinger and all the skill of a Houdini!

Heed Washington's Warning -:- By James T. Williams

In the light of the latest eruption of the Austrian volcano which is turning the thoughts of the great powers of Europe toward their respective swords, Americans will find it profitable to turn their eyes again toward the farewell address of George Washington.

In this immortal valedictory soon to be delivered by the side of the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States in the Hall of Archives now nearing completion midway between the Capitol and the White House will be found these prophetic words:

"Europe has a set of primary interests, which to us have none or a very remote relation. Hence, she must be engaged in frequent controversies, the causes of which are essentially foreign to our concerns. Hence, therefore, it must be unwise in us to implicate ourselves, by artificialities, in the ordinary vicissitudes of her politics, or the ordinary combinations and collisions of her friendships or enmities.

"A DIFFERENT COURSE"

"Our detached and distant situation invites and enables us to pursue a different course.

"If we remain one people, under an efficient government, the period is not far off, when we may defy material injury from external annoyance; when we may take such an attitude as will cause the neutrality, we may at any time resolve upon, to be scrupulously respected; when belligerent nations, under the impossibility of making acquisitions upon us, will not lightly hazard the giving us provocation; when we may choose peace or war, as our interest, guided by justice, shall counsel.

"Why forego the advantages of so peculiar a situation? Why quit our own soil to stand upon foreign ground? Why, by interweaving our destiny with that of any part of Europe, entangle our peace and prosperity in the toils of European ambition, rivalship, interest, humor or caprice?"

By a singular coincidence the news of Austria's plight and all Europe's resultant apprehensions broke upon the federal city in the very week in which from the committee on foreign relations—"the great committee of the Senate"—one of its veteran employes was sending to the four corners of the country, under various senatorial franks, a most timely and arresting public document.

This document contains the brief of an American jurist, statesman and diplomatist—Hon. J. Reuben Clark, Jr., of Utah—setting forth the manifold reasons why the United States should keep out of the League of Nations court—erroneously called the World court.

After giving all the negative and affirmative arguments against implicating ourselves in this "artificial tie" with the vicissitudes of European politics and with "the combinations and collisions of her friendships" Mr. Clark, who was the worthy successor of the late Dwight W. Morrow as American Ambassador to Mexico, says:

"I have touched upon a few of the ramifications which are incident to our membership in the League court and indicated a few dangers which need to be explored. I give notice there are many others.

"Furthermore, I recur to the basic principle laid down at the beginning of my statement that the people of the United States have solemnly declared their unwillingness to become members of the League of Nations and I ask the committee on foreign relations to consider whether by joining this court and so bringing ourselves within the power and jurisdiction of the league, we also subject to some of the most drastic and iniquitous provisions of the league covenant, we should not violate the people's mandate and grossly betray their trust."

ANOTHER PLEA

When the new Congress convenes the Senate will again be urged by internationalists to ratify the league court protocols in spite of the admonitions of the farewell address, the warnings and appeals of Adams and Jefferson and Madison and Monroe, of Abraham Lincoln and Grover Cleveland and Theodore Roosevelt. It is the most vital question now before the Senate.

In view of what is again happening in Europe—happenings which prove that Europe has not changed with the years—every candidate for the Senate ought to tell the people of his state whether he agrees with the argument of Ambassador Clark that we ought not to go into the league of nations either through the front door of the covenant or the back door of its court.

FATIGUE

Weary the body with labor and then
Sleep will refresh and restore you again.
Weary of walking,
And weary of talking,
But never grow weary of children and men.

Tire as you must of the heat of the day
And sleep will return what was taken away,
But there is a weariness,
Deadly with dreariness,
Never grow weary of laughter and play.

Never grow weary of friendships and flowers
Never grow tired of life's sunshine and showers.
Blithely and gayly
Enjoy the world daily,
Sleep can do nothing when once the heart sours.

Human Side of the News; Getz and the Wild

By Edwin C. Hill

In Africa, George F. Getz, fighting tigers, elephants, kudas, impallas and oryxes, found the rhinoceros the toughest fighter and the most dangerous antagonist.

One wonders how it would compare with that big, horned deficit of the Republican party with which Mr. Getz, as national party treasurer, is now contending.

And one wonders, too, how one who has led a life like his can enjoy himself trying to get a half-million on a deficit. Vagaries and side lines of multi-millionaires are often surprising and always interesting.

Mr. Getz, Chicago coal baron, is an animal fancier, or a zoophyliet, if the theme demands more dignity.

His farm near Holland, Michigan, houses lions, leopards, elephants, ocelots, tigers, panthers, a 30-foot python and enough other assorted fauna to stock any good municipal zoo.

Animals, prize-fights and big league politics round out his genial later years, with his six big coal companies just running along on their own momentum and not interfering much with his main interests.

He likes to go out and round up his own livestock. When he was in Africa, in 1928 with his son, George, Jr., he took along a crate of boxing gloves on the long safari through the Tan-gan-yu-ka territory in East Africa.

When the black porters were inclined to become mutinous, he and George put on the gloves and staged a fast bout, to divert and pacify the black boys. The boys were delighted and insisted on putting on the gloves, but the one who got smacked reached for his knife, and only by fumbling glove saved the other chap.

Mr. Getz was allied with the late Tex Rickard in several sporting ventures, including the Dempsey-Tunney fight in 1927. Venerable, bland and Romanesque, he is no imposing figure at most of the better ringsides—and at the great political conventions, too.

The boy came from Mechanicsburg, Pa., leaving home at 12—becoming a B. & O. messenger in Chicago, starting his coal climb as a clerk at 17, paid his way out with diligently-gathered pinlone, and into that happier domain of his boyhood dreams—lions and tigers and orators and leather pushers.

He was a telegraph operator in his later boyhood years, and in his home he shepherds millions and those who have lived long with the roar of the crowd often turn with impassioned interest to some balance brought forward from their youth.

The late George Eastman, Rochester camera magnate, used to make huge and elaborate chocolate cakes in the kitchen of his mansion; he kept a cow in his back yard; he whittled in the attic at night; he had a passion for calendar reform; he collected trick cigarette cigaters of gold and platinum; he toyed with his huge pipe organ.

The late William G. Bixby of polish fame, was a true fanatic. On his big estate at Baldwin, Long Island, he had more than five hundred varieties of nut trees. Eagerly he scouted grafting, nursed, manicured and fondled his precious nut trees and kept up a Niagara of correspondent with nut addicts all over the world.

Elephants are the deep preoccupation of Matthew C. Brush, of the American International Corporation—but gold, silver, crystal and brass.

He has more than 2000 of them—the best collection of this kind in the world. Wherever he goes, he carries them in his pockets gloating over them like a lad with a pocket full of glassies and agates.

Samuel Untermeyer, the great lawyer, lives his leisure hours with his magnificent treasures of orchids, on his famous estate, "Greystone," near Yonkers. For many years a regal orchid from his greenhouse has graced his coat lapel each day.

When President Roosevelt climbs out of his hair shirt, after a hard day's work, he forgets his cares with his great stamp collection. He has about ten thousand stamps, with groups and series carefully filled out and indexed. He finds boyish delight here.

Premier Hermann Goering of Germany collects bone. But Adolph Hitler finds a gentler pastime in hoarding plants. At his Alpine estate at Obersalzberg near Berechtesgaden, he has a large collection of rare and exotic plants.

His obsession, however, is to find plants which bloom at unusual times. Perhaps, with his Herculean work of co-ordinating this and that, he likes to put in his off hours on something surprising and unco-ordinated.

Clarence Darrow is a cross word puzzle fiend, and parks around drummers' joke books. His favorite is that old book "Good Gravy," which he always has somewhere near by.

"Alfonsito," eldest son of the former king of Spain, is a connoisseur of pigs and a famous collector.

WELLS LIKES TOYS

H. G. Wells, writing volument against war and soldiering, puts in long hours with his collection of toy soldiers, deploying them in terrific battles up and down his living room floor.

Winston Churchill is a painter of note. Lord Grey was a bird fancier. The Prince of Wales specializes in a model library, principally jazz. Kathleen Norris boards stories of murder trials. George White has the largest and greatest collection of black neckties, and Eddie Cantor collects hats.

Eugene O'Neill is absorbed with prize-fights and six-day bike races. Jack London collects locomotives. Dr. Thaddeus P. Hyatt has the world's greatest collection of fairy pictures. Newton D. Baker piles up mountains of books, of all ages and in all languages—and reads them, too.

Former Vice-President Curtis walks by starlight with Charles Dickens. Owen D. Young farms. The world knows, of course, of Henry Ford's treasures of Americanism.

Democracy Upheld

IT IS particularly gratifying not only that the San Francisco strike was won by the community, but that it was WON IN THE RIGHT WAY—ON THE RIGHT NOTE, ON THE TRUE PRINCIPLE.

From the moment the challenge was flung in the face of the citizenship of San Francisco, the intolerable implications of it were perceived.

Here was nothing less than a defiance of constituted authority—a defiance of the city and State governments.

A defiance, in short, of the popular will duly expressed—a rejection of the fundamental principle of democracy.

Every material consequence of the strike—the stoppage of business, the threat of starvation, the interruption of essential services upon which the life and health of the entire community depended—grew out of this challenge to the community's right of self-government.

Boundless credit is due to Mayor Rossi of San Francisco and to Governor Merriam for refusing to entertain any proposal to end the strike which would have blurred or in any way compromised the principles for whose defense the whole people had united in a common resistance to it.

NOT only the Governor and the Mayor, but the public-spirited citizens who flocked to their support, were determined that the fundamental principles upon which the security of the community depended should emerge from the attack not only vindicated, but that they should be forced upon the acceptance of those who had been so rash as to call them in question.

The outcome is, with entire truth, pronounced by Mayor Rossi to be a victory for government and Americanism.

While expressing his sympathy with the legitimate activities of organized labor and his confidence that such differences as exist between labor and its employers will speedily be adjusted upon the basis of justice to all, the Mayor declared:

"We will tolerate no tyranny, either of Communism or of any other interference, with constituted authority."

Undoubtedly this expresses the thought of every sober-minded and responsible section of public opinion throughout the country.

THE struggle was not an isolated one. It was a representative battle.

Indications are not lacking that what happened in San Francisco is a simmering possibility in other cities. Such are the consequences of faulty reasoning, mistaken counsels and designing agitation—the latter too much tolerated by us.

What happened in San Francisco, however, will be a powerful deterrent to the sinister elements in other cities which seek to scatter hate and foment violence, and by mass pressure to reduce an entire community to subjugation.

The citizens of San Francisco have struck a blow—a resounding blow—in behalf of law and order and the inherent power of democracy, not only in the United States, but throughout the world.
